We have foregone any remarks until this time in regard to the date of the reopening of College after the Christmas holidays because those who would appreciate them must have been absent until now. To the returning heroes from the West and South we extend a belated greeting and wishes for a Happy New Year and successful mid-year examinations. We also wish to congratulate them upon their independent spirit. For the Freshman going home for the first time since the campus rush we knew from experience how hard it has been to tear himself away in order to return to college, and we are glad he has had enough cuts left to enable him to stay two days longer at home than many less foresighted. In short, we are sorry that all could not have had the privilege of returning to College to-day instead of last Thursday. The two college days of last week were hardly successful with half attendance at classes on the part of both teachers and students. The College Department should have taken the position assumed by the second, third and fourth-year medical students, who issued names of their professors that they would not attend classes until to-day. We are sorry for the poor Freshmen, who sought more legal means and are still profitless to the office, further than which it never got. The Dean of the Medical Department was quite right, however, in replying to the Freshman that no action of the Trustees would be necessary to grant the request. We sincerely hope that the University will see the reasonableness of our position and adjust the calendar a little better for future vacations, otherwise many will feel bound to believe that when we get a nice time we should take it.

With all the many conveniences and facilities provided by a generous and thoughtful Board of Trustees to make life comfortable for University students, there is still one thing lacking. We speak of it partly because we must have something to say, but chiefly because we think that a reminder in print is a strong stimulant to action. The little improvement to which we refer is a light of some kind over the directory of names at the main entrance to the Dormitories. This possible convenience has been discussed by boards of representatives from time immemorial, but they have never taken the trouble to see that the light is provided. It is quite possible that the authorities thought the gigantic—almost self-illuminating—sign "office" opposite the directory might reflect enough of the street light to enable persons to read the names, but a flash of the sign may help strangers in discovering where abouts of the office, it is a poor investment at night. The ordinary procedure when anyone wants to find an address is to use a thousand matches in a vain endeavor to buckle the wind and to light up the directory, after which it becomes necessary to arouse the vigilant "Mike," who will obligingly produce a lantern. This process requires nearly an entire evening. It is, therefore, generally necessary to inspect the directory a day in advance, in order that you may be able to reach a man's room before "taps." Almost any kind of a light would serve the purpose. It need not cost many thousands of dollars, but the saving in matches that would result would more than pay for it in less than a year. We merely throw this off as a suggestion.

"Varsity" Debate Trials. Owing to the unusually large number of candidates for the intercollegiate debating teams this year the University Debate Committee has found it necessary to cut down the speeches of each contest in the preliminary trials on January 17th to six minutes, instead of nine as was formerly announced. The Committee feels that if the candidates really deserve to make the semifinals he can demonstrate his capabilities in six minutes. While if each man were allowed eight minutes, the preliminaries would be spun out to an interminable length. The members of the University Debate Committee lias found in matches that would result in a man's room before "taps.

The judges for the preliminary, semifinal and final trials will be professors from the College, Law School and Wharton School. Dr. House is chairman of the Committee on Judges. A sub-committee, consisting of Rice- bham, Paul, and Killiam, chairman, was appointed to take measures for having the group photographs of recent "Varsity" teams suitably framed and put up in Price Hall, as has always been the Pennsylvania custom. Students making the team this year will be eligible to wear the solid gold "Varsity" P on the watch fob, which will be awarded by the committee to those who make the team.

Garrick—"The Squaw Man."
William Ferris firms begins the third week of his engagement at the Garrick in "The Squaw Man" tonight. It is the general consensus of opinion that no play that has been seen at the Garrick this year has attained to such a pitch of dramatic interest as this, and the faithful and artistic portrayal of the scenes of the West of twenty years ago have made an ir- resistible appeal to the forces of good entertainment. There is such an abundance of human sympathy in the play and such careful portrayal of sincere and amusing American types that it would be strange indeed if it were not a popular success in Philadelphia, which may be consid- ered the birthplace of the American drama. The Garrick national play will have to be approved of for a return engagement of two weeks in April if the date can be arranged.
Manager Row has already made overtures for a return engagement of two weeks in April if the date can be arranged, and his is the best proof of the satisfying quality of the offering that now holds the boards. If this return date is not arranged, it is the intention of Mr. Ferris to present a new Spanish play he has secured during a series of daily matinees. "The Squaw Man" presents a series of picturesque stage settings, while the star receives the assistance of a well-balanced company.

Lyric—"About Town."
Low Fields and his company of stars at the Lyric Theatre have made an immense hit in the musical entertain- ment, "About Town," and the house has been crowded at every per- formance. The box office receipts have equaled those of any week of the Warfield engagement, and the indica- tions are that a new record for atten- dance will be made during the three weeks of the company's stay in town. Every one of the company has scored heavily on its performance and, altogether, the show is one that theatre-goers will want to miss. Low Fields has a role that he invests with uncommonly fine humor, and he is admirably supported by Blanche Ring, Peter F. Daley, George Beban, Edna Wallace Hopper, Harry Fisher, Louise Dresser and a host of minor principals, chorus people and dancers. The production has been staged by that master of stage management, Julian Mitchell. There will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.
