WHARTON SCHOOL ADDRESSED
ON LARGE TUNNEL EXTENSION

GREAT GROWTH OF POPULATION MAKES THIS NECESSARY.

Explains Importance of Improved Transportation and Flow of Goods to the Area

Mr. A. J. County, formerly a student at the Wharton School, was a guest speaker at the meeting of the Wharton Club of New York, held recently at the Hotel Astor. Mr. County is now a partner in the firm of County & Company, of New York City, and is also a member of the Wharton Club of Philadelphia.

Mr. County said: "The population of the City of Philadelphia has increased greatly in recent years, and the demand for improved transportation and flow of goods to the area has become very pressing. At present, the transportation facilities are inadequate to meet the needs of the growing population, and this has led to a great deal of inconvenience and waste of time and money.

"The Wharton School has been working on this problem for some time, and we have decided to make a study of the situation and to make some recommendations for improvement. We have found that the present system of transportation is not sufficient to meet the needs of the city, and we believe that a new system of transportation should be established to meet the increased demand.

"We have been able to make a number of recommendations for improvement, and we believe that these recommendations will greatly increase the efficiency of transportation in the city. We are confident that the city authorities will take these recommendations into consideration, and that a new system of transportation will be established in the near future.

"We believe that the Wharton School has a great responsibility in this matter, and we are doing our best to meet this responsibility. We believe that the school has the knowledge and the resources to make a real contribution to the solution of this problem, and we believe that the school should continue to work on this problem in the future."

The value of a boardwalk across the campus between Thirty-fourth street and the Gymnasium has become more than evident, now that the campus is almost impasse at this place on account of the snow. To those accustomed to walking across the campus to Franklin Field it is and will be, when the snow begins to melt, a great annoyance to be compelled to make a detour. The ordinary undergraduate is too busy with his studies and other things to warrant such a waste of valuable time as the lack of a boardwalk.

The Pennsylvanian has been looking for communications from undergraduates and graduates for some time past, but it has looked in vain. One of the greatest principles that rules the editorial board is the right of free speech, and we think that the honest expression of undergraduate and graduate opinion also should find its way into our columns through the communication columns. One of the recent indignities that we have watched with surprise is the few abuses at Pennsylvania at the present moment is the sudden friendship of those who used to send us complaints about everything, from Evening School to sign boards.

From the reports in the daily newspapers one might think that an epidemic of diphtheria at the University had brought about a panic here. There is no cause whatever for any hysterics over the three or four cases of the disease discovered in the University Hospital. Such methods of preventing contagion are known to science now that there is absolutely no danger nor any reason for nervousness.

The entire University is much shocked to bear of the illness of Head Field Coach Robert G. Torrey, who caught diphtheria in the Hospital while performing his duties in the children's ward as a resident physician. Dr. Torrey is now in the Municipal Hospital, where every precaution will be taken to the medical attendance of several famous specialists.

What is the matter with the theatrical managers? Are they going crazy over the college play? We thought that the "College Widow" showed quite a new idea of what college life is, but now we have "Brown of Harvard" and "Strongheart" again to remind us of the unreality of a college career. If there are such profane or such marvelous occurrences at any college in the country, it is too dear of the playwright to expose them so heartlessly. What a wonderful idea of college men, manners and mores—what the uninitiated must receive from these "collegiate dramas!"

We do not wonder that the management sometimes try to persuade college athletes to add a touch of reality by appearing on their stage in their actual harness. It is scarcely dignified, however, for a college man to use his Alma Mater's colors and his athletic position to advertise a theatrical production.

Professor Johnson's Address.

"Commercial and Christianity" is the subject of his address by Dr. Emory R. Johnson, tonight in the auditorium of Houston Hall at 7:30.

He says: "The philosophy is the outgrowth of the conditions of life surrounding the people who hold the philosophy. A religious system tends to crystallize and to make social life and institutions unprogressive unless social and economic forces overcome this conservative influence.

"Commerce has been the greatest aid to Christian evangelization. The evangelizing nations are the commercial nations. Commerce and Christianity are the forces which cause civilized nations to work for the betterment of the backward peoples of the world."

"The relation of commerce to Christianity will be indicated in the address by illustrations drawn from the history of the founding nations of the world, particular emphasis being given to British and American history."

Lyric—"Brown of Harvard."

"Brown of Harvard" is in its final week at the Lyric Theatre. The piece is a bright comedy of modern American college life, and is enthusiastically suited to the abilities of the star, Harry Woodcraft, in the title role. His excellent training as a light comedian serves him in good stead, and he quite realizes the popular and correct ideal of the youthful collegian. The management has provided some handsome stage settings and a capital supporting cast. Willette Kwash has the leading feminine role.—Adv.
