The place of debating at Pennsylvania is—not alone because of the incomparable training it affords the students who make the team, but also because it serves to transform the balance of college life and to keep the competitive attention of undergraduates from being exclusively centered upon athletics.

The all-round excellence of the University catalogue for 1906-07, which was recently distributed among the students, has given currency to the suggestion that at least one copy of the catalogue should be sent by "the office" to each of the leading preparatory schools every year. Information as to requirements and courses could then be gotten first-hand from the only really reliable source—the catalogues themselves. Many Pennsylvanians are to be found on the faculties of these institutions, throughout the country; these men could supplement the information about courses, available in the catalogues, by personal suggestions and explanations to students who contemplated coming here. In the long run these catalogues, sent out anew each year, would doubtless prove the basis for some highly successful "missionary work." In addition, to send them out would be an act of courtesy that the preparatory institutions would be sure to appreciate.

News from Other Colleges.

The Naval Academy has practically completed its football schedule for next fall. Harvard will go to Annapolis for her first football game with the Midshipmen. The Army and Navy game will be played on Franklin Field most likely on November 30th. There is some doubt as to whether or not Princeton will play the sailors this year.
