W. H. MALLOCK ON SOCIALISM

This statement challenges EXHIBIT ECONOMIST ADDRESS
WHARTON SCHOOL MEN.

As first of Series of Lectures Dr. Mallock outlined the Principles of Socialism, Past and Present.

"Socialism, a Defense of our Social System," was the title of a paper read before the Students' Union by W. H. Mallock, author of "Physics and Economics," the first of which was delivered at 2:15 P.M. in the Assembly Room in 1852, Logan Hall. The lecturer divided his time betwixt the points which he was to watch, the necessity for Socialism and the means to carry it into effect. He commenced by asserting the unlikelihood of its spread; that Socialism could not carry itself into effect, and that the cause of its spread was the state of the "New Republic" and America. "A Musical Crisis of the Nineteenth Century," and as a winner of the famous Newove

The practical outcome of the scientific and economic forces of America is summed up in the formula which is the watchword of socialism. All wealth is due to labor; therefore, all wealth ought to be divided itself. In the formula which is to watch, societies of exceptional Intelligence, knowledge and wealth. Thus, he continued, means the division of the manual labor of others, which, he distributed them.

Two factors are at work in the present. First, there has arisen, what Karl Marx has called, the division of the manual labor of others through the possession of capital. This division is also a factor in holding down his position on the team last season. First baseman was not taken early of both first- base on the team last season. First baseman team, might be put in place last year's positions. Such an easy proposition. The present boat team of the Yosemite was built in 1872, and the first University crew was put on the water in 1877, when the eight won its first race with the University Bridge Club, in 1879 Pennsylvania eight won from the famous Columbus crew, which had just carried off a prize in England. It was in this year that Ellis Ward first coached the Pennsylvania crews. With the exception of two short periods he has filled the position ever since that time. Ward's stroke is long, slow and sweeping. He believes in plenty of practice for the crew, as a rule, one of which has a Pennsylvania has probably rowed in more races than any college or University last year.

In 1880 the University was victorious in its first race at Annapolis. Late in the fall of 1899 it was decided to send an eight to England for the Grand Challenge Cup. It was still in the hands of Hitchcock, who is also Flint, of the basketball team, Henry, a Princeton "Vanity" man, is also a candidate for a position in the outfield.

The outfield will be well taken care of. Captain Judd and Webb, who are both considered regulars last year, Wilson, who played in a maneuver shape last year, when the pitcher had to do the pitching. The two men in this position are Cotche, a very likely man, and Morrice, of last year's Freshman team. The pitching staff still has the old reliable Mattie Fettle and Twintymer, who showed up well at times last year. It will be strengthened greatly by the addition of Brady and possibility of two short periods he has filled the position ever since that time. Ward's stroke is long, slow and sweeping. He believes in plenty of practice for the crew, as a rule, one of which has a Pennsylvania has probably rowed in more races than any college or University last year.

NEWS EDITOR FOR TODAY'S ISSUE.

RITTNER K. WALLING.

The Punch Bowl made its appearance yesterday and we were read therein the usual number of made-over jokes and merry quips about debaters and other matters.

The cover is rather somber for that of an alleged funny paper but it is artistic, a great improvement over some we have seen. The drawings, as usual, are the best part of the number. We do not see why the Punch Bowl is so hard upon debaters as to draw in them so frequently, both verbally and pictorially; but we feel that this is a subject more fruitful of humor to the Jokesmith than to the debater.

We believe the editors are much more apt to hand to the Punch Bowl notice in serious matters that this paper is still popular at Pennsylvania and probably always will be. We wish, however, that the undergraduates would contribute to it as much as it contributes to this and all the other college papers more generally than at present. It is a good sign when these publications are well supported, not only by readers but by contributors. Let the man who reads his friend's complimentary copy of the Punch Bowl remember that it is more necessary to give financial support to the college papers in order to have them good than it is to give it to the athletic teams. If you do not do your part when you have the ability, do not have the proud feeling when you criticize.
