Ben Greet Talks to Students.

"If what you take is In Its simplicity," he continued, "you get it so much better. Why do we prefer to go through a lot of traditional nonsense when we might go directly to the heart of Shakespeare?" He then referred to Hamlet's advice to the players where he tells them to speak tripping and not to muffle their words, and showed how this passage proved that Shakespeare's actors spoke distinctly and rapidly.

In exalting upon Hamlet's next bit of advice, that the players should not see the act too much, Mr. Greet said that gesture is necessary, but the action must be suited to the word and must not overstep the modesty of nature. The actor must "hold the mirror up to nature." Too often the personality of the actor is thrown into the character in the desire to satisfy the demand for something new. There is too much of the crr, "Act your head off."

In concluding, Mr. Greet said that there were no fads about art: "Art is lasting; and if you don't like Beethoven, Wagner, Shakespeare and Raphael, it is all a matter of taste, only it is bad taste."

At 9:15 o'clock last night the fourth play of the series was presented by the Ben Greet Company in the Academy of Music. Shylock was portrayed as Mr. Greet pictured him this morning, "an unmitigated sycophant."

Reception to S. Dickson, Esq.

Alumnus of the Law Department last evening held their annual reunion and gave a reception to Samuel Dickson, Esq., LL. D., Chancellor of the Law Association of Philadelphia and one of the Trustees of the University.

At the invitation of the University Mr. Dickson delivered an interesting address entitled "George Sharswood: Teacher and Friend." The address was given before the members of the Society and invited guests in Price Hall, Law School, shortly after eight o'clock. Immediately after the address a reception was tendered to Mr. Dickson in the rotunda of the Law School building, following which was an informal supper.

The building was beautifully decorated, the great staircase at the head of the meeting being studded with palms and Bowers of the corridor forming one huge emblazonment of the University. The book of songs used in the evening was given before the members of the Society and invited guests in Price Hall, Law School, shortly after eight o'clock. Immediately after the address a reception was tendered to Mr. Dickson in the rotunda of the Law School building, following which was an informal supper.

Grand—Viola Gillette Opera Company.
A new comic opera, "The Girl and the Bandit," which will delight the soul of the lover and the spirit of the lived, will be seen all this week at the Grand Opera House.

The book is by J. C. Cooperwood, who has written some of the greatest comic opera successes of the American stage, and Mrs. A. C. Tyler. The lyrics were written by Mrs. Tyler, while the music is by Frederick Con-Nilh. The book is interesting, the story, agreeable, and the music of that varied order that includes everything the theatre-goer likes to hear. Some of the music is worthy of grand opera, there is a sentiment that is better than many numbers to be found in grand opera.

Miss Viola Gillette, last heard here as Prince Charming in "The Beauty and the Beast," is in the prima donna of the organization, and has one of the best numbers of the opera to sing. Matthews will be on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.
