No one appreciates more than the undergraduates of the University the work which Provost Harrison has done for Pennsylvania in the twelve years during which he has held office as the chief officer of administration. Graduates of more than twelve years standing who return to the University for the first time since graduation are as surprised at what they see as would the Dutch settlers if they could see New York.

Thirty new buildings within a dozen years is a phenomenal record. The present life, prosperity and premier standing of Pennsylvania is due in a very large degree to the activities of our Provost. The present splendid dormitory system, in which centres so much that makes life at Pennsyl-
