NEWS EDITOR OF TODAY'S ISSUE
JOHN H. FARRISON.

For lack of space preserved yesterday a complete discussion of the letter from Mr. Howard K. Mohr, business manager of the Mask and Wig Club. In his letter Mr. Mohr says:

1. That a mail system of distributing tickets for the Easter show is impracticable.

2. That while members of cast and chorus may have special privileges in getting tickets, other undergraduates cannot, because it is unjust to friends of the University, who support the club.

3. That it has been impossible to prevent patrons from passing their cards into the hands of speculators, due to the system of standing in line.

4. That the student body is not the least antagonistic, and that section of the undergraduates interested in the functions and purposes of the Mask and Wig Club is fully sympathetic with the management of that organization.

It has never been shown that a mail system is either impossible or impracticable. This system is effective in all metropolitan theatres and for athletic events. Blank could be used as for the Army and Navy football games and仰ographs could signify the order of their preference for the eight performances. The chief difficulty would be the added work.

It may be that it is more unjust to prevent the undergraduates from supporting their own club than to take that privilege away from outsiders. If Pennsylvania has not supported Mask and Wig, the reasons are obvious, as a correspondent points out. It seems to be true that Mask and Wig poses a University of Pennsylvania affair when it is actually run by outsiders. Undergraduates even finding it impossible to secure seats because certain Philadelphians regard it as their exclusive right, and seize the interference of undergraduates, for whose wishes they care nothing at all.

Patrons have found it convenient to make arrangements with ticket brokers because of the success of the system. It has been necessary for the few undergraduates who had the interest and the means to organize themselves into relay for the purpose. The patrons cannot do this very easily. Many of them have not desired to hire persons to do it for them. That is where the spectacle has reached a highest by combining a certain number of tickets at a reasonable and looking after it with a high price when undergraduates are harried. No effort seems to have been made to prevent patrons from using this method, yet the evil certainly should and could be eliminated.

Mr. Mohr's letter, partly, namely, the desirability of the students taking this method, yet the evil certainly should and could be eliminated.
