COMMUNICATION.

of this need the gymnastic hysteresis must appeal to every eating man as a case of wretched misdirected energy.

If the University is anxious to further not only our intellectual but our physical interests, let us have a decent place to dine than a magnificent: palace of athletics.

One advantage, by the way, of a University Dining Hall would be that the students would not find it necessary to discipline refractory students into regular attendance.

I beg to be

Very truly yours,

We publish in today's issue another communication advocating the building of a Dining Commons, in which the writer clearly states his views.

in addition to expressing the general sentiment of the student body. The Pennsylvania has at various times filled the same position, realizing that such a common is essential to the health of many of our undergraduates, and that better fellowship would exist among the student body at large if such a commons were built.

This matter was brought to the attention of the president early last fall and methods of reform were suggested and fully discussed, but the Board of Trustees were not in a position to give much consideration to their suggestions.

We are glad, however, to observe that the subject has not been forgotten, by at least some of the students, for it is only through the hearty cooperation of all that any material results can be accomplished.
