COMMUNICATION.

The Pennsylvania Society invites all members of the University to contribute to this column, but is not responsible for the sentiments expressed.

Editor of the Pennsylvania:

Dear Sir,—there is a man, he be ever so stout an advocate of compulsory attendance at gymnasiums, who might find, that in the world of the last two days he finds it so. Nature herself has taken a hand to complete against the tyrannical powers that be, and to design their duty to have the strongest wish to take health in Philadelphia holiday is happily thwarted.

Said philosopher has said: "Nature never makes mistakes," and if the old saw is true, it behooves those who make life a burden for many of our college students to mend their ways.

We take great pleasure in publishing a complete list of the men honored by election to the Sphinx and Friars Senior Roster. The Pennsylvania extends hearty congratulations to these men and wishes them every success.

We firmly believe that such organizations of men so prominent in the activities of College and materially in the future and educational reputation of the College as large. The Eng shaves men who will become most im portant in College. In their various de partments, they will acquire and maintain the prestige and reputation.

This is the conclusion of the vote for the casting day, for it must be granted that these elections carry with them that much responsibility.

For Dane Nature manifested her will in so uncertain signs. When the gymnastics advertised its annual ex-novation for May 6th it made the wise reservation, "weather permitting." actuated by no anomaly of impending trouble, but the weather did not permit. A parade started, hast-ing through the afternoon, made it imperative to postpone the show.

Then the officials, in league with the Weather Man, gave out: "The ex-novation will be held tomorrow at the hour appointed for today," and, given held in their sorrowing, added:"if it rains tomorrow, the exhibition will be abandoned." They did the rain and the course of events, they never said one word, for they never expected to speak.

All the night through, and all the morning of the seventh and all through the afternoon, the weather was kept out of the view of his worship, making the terms of the game all over.

The most ainful blackmail would go through those legislative divisions.

Preliminary blue prints were the past efforts when Pheifs himself expressed the nature of the unfortunate undergraduate, the undergraduates resolved themselves to face—and the exhibition was called off.

Thus were the forces of Nature brought to bear against the hard headed servants of a great season. May it serve them to breed in future the seeds of such as your humble servant.
