THE PENNSYLVANIAN

The Sophomore cremation exercises, which were a source of regret to the upper classmen who witnessed it. For the first time in years, the traditional ceremony has been losing in interest, principally because of the lack of serious effort on the part of the students conducting it, and the affair is in danger of becoming a mere series of boxing and wrestling events, with the burning of a few effigies to close the afternoon's entertainments.

Last year the Class of 1909 made an admirable effort to get back to the real crema- tion. This year both boxing and wrestling were only minor details while cinematograph views, alternating with caricatures of faculty favor- ites on the screen, and in eulogy in effigy of the unpopular professors were the principal features of the pro- gram. But this year's class failed to abide by the old tradition; the opera in the tug were given a far too promi- nent place, and had not been for the extraordinarily funny performing of the University Band on even the formal itself would have fallen flat.

The cremation is too picturesque a custom to be permitted to change its nature from a valuable expression of student opinion to a display of doubtful propriety in the main art of self-defence. We hope the Class of 1911 and future classes who will hand the custom down will give their at- tention to Pennsylvania Night move to their friends in the happy trees in the ranks of the wrestlers and heroes.
