At college more worthy and none which brings more compensation to the worker in widening his sphere of influence and in working for Pennsylvania than work on The Pennsylvania. Besides the valuable rating one gets in writing—in getting news, in selecting what is vital and discounting what is worthless—the members of the board come in contact and learn to know the really big men of the University. The captains and managers of the several teams, the chairman and members of the different committees, the numerous societies and the heads of the University; all these must be approached in news. The contact which one gain daily with such men is of inestimable value.

The Pennsylvania wants the best men of the Freshman Class who are not overshadowed with other activities at college to present themselves as a candidate. Every man who enters Pennsylvania—especially of The College—should take up some form of college activity, and work on The Pennsylvania is certainly one of the most commendable. We desire and must have the best type of men, and trust that our appeal will be responded to at once.

Professor Johnson to Lecture.
