PRICE, TWO CENTS

RESHARD WINS SECOND GAME FROM TIGERS, 37-11.

The Pennsylvania basketball team defeated Princeton for the second time this season last night in Westminister Hall by the score of 37 to 11. The Oranges and Black displayed far better form than in the first game and held the Red and Blue to a lower score than before, but the visitors proved Inestimably weak in shooting goals. Although the game was not especially rough, many fouls were called for holding, Princeton being heavily penalized for fouls.

Keinath started the game for the first time this season and played a good floor game, although his fame shoulder bothered him in his shooting. Hough and McNichol were the stars of the game, the former exhibiting magnificent floor work and the latter inside capturing several difficult shots. Veedor was the Princeton star, scoring nine of their eleven points.

McNichol started the scoring with a goal from foul and a few minutes later Sport tallied a free throw, replied with another and McNichol increased Pennsylvania's lead with a spectacular shot from the centre of the floor. A foul goal for Princeton served to awak en the Red and Blue once more, and they drew away rapidly, the score at half being 20 to 9.

In the second half Pennsylvania started like a whirlwind and rolled up twelve points before the Journeysman tallied a point. Here Hough and Tobey went in and the visitors braced their score with a field goal and several from free throws. Their good form lasted but a few moments. Their playing could cause little effect, and a few minutes later the game closed with the score co Pennsylvania, 37; Princeton, 11. The line up and summaries:

phasize every word which he has versed in the hands of every man. In the University, hallowed no chance to hear the University addresses and the departure it is compelled not a single news in doing; and the addresses referred to, however, have been delivered at 1:30 o'clock.

Two notable addresses have been delivered this year to the students on Friday mornings in Chapel which have been excellent and instructive and well worth the short time which have been given out of the day's work to hear them. The two addresses referred to, however, have given more than of ordinary or local interest, and we cannot but think that the entire University body could not have been present to hear them.

The PENNSYLVANIAN printed Professor Child's address in full and we print in this morning's issue the address of Mr. Carson. Although we are compelled to exclude some University news in doing this, and while it is a departure from the old paths and customs of the PENNSYLVANIAN, nevertheless we feel we are justified in such a departure by the part which excellence of the matter printed. Many of the students of the College did not hear other address and the men from the other departments of the University had no chance to hear them. This gives them the addresses, which they would otherwise not be able to get. If it were possible to do so we would like to put the address of Mr. Carson in the hands of every man in the University and if possible to emphasize every word which he has spoken.

No more appropriate subject could have been taken in delivering an address to college men than "Practical Ideas." There is one criticism which has always been made by many in regard to a college education, and that is that it unfit's the man for practical work in life. It is said that college men are too theoretical, and in many cases find themselves unable to come down to the hard realities of life and succeed. In some cases we believe this is true, and it is to these visionary beings who walk on the air with their thoughts in the cloudy thoughts in the clouds that this address is directed. There are many sentences in Mr. Carson's address which we would like to emphasize, but this one especially, in the light of the times, seems most fitting:

"I am satisfied that there is a middle ground between the practical and the ideal, and that the man will be successful who, while having high standards of excellence in view and clinging to them with passionate enthusiasm, yet tempers his ardor by a recognition of the truth that there are in life certain hard and stubborn laws and facts with which he must reckon if he would avoid failure."

Crew Candidates to Report. This year's crew outlook is not as bright as it might be, but with such men as Dean, Rogers, Hendrie, Ballard, Crooks and Brandood, of last year's Yarn and Bennett, Fox, Thompson and Stiller, of the Freshmen crew, the work of developing a fair crew will be somewhat simplified. Of last year's eight Edina Toulin, Shoemaker and Drayton are lost, and their places will be hard to fill. The rowing machines in the Gymnasium are being overhauled, and will be ready for the candidates to start work a week from Monday. Coach Ellis Ward will keep the men on the machines until the first of March, when work will be started on the river if possible. Candidates for the Yarn crew will report each day in the rowing room at 3:30, while the Freshmen candidates will report at 3:00 o'clock.

Sundy Services. Rev. H. Howell Bates, of the Spring Street Neighborhood House, New York City, will be the speaker at the University services tomorrow morning. This is the fourth time during the present college year that Rev. Bates has conducted the services, the second Sunday in every month having been reserved for his address.

Philo- mathesian Meeting. Regular business was transacted at the weekly meeting of the Philo- mathesian Society last night. In addition, an interesting literary program was given. Koschwitz, '12, was inducted into the organization.
