TETRAZINNI SATURDAY NIGHT.

Hammelmann Announces That Prima Donna Will Sing Role of Elvira in Bellini’s “I Puritani.”

Again this week the Italian opera held forth at the Philadelphia Opera House was the mesmeric Mrs. Hammelmann, America’s most successful opera, “I Puritani.”

This work was first produced at Pisa in 1835. The music of the opera is a triumph of the composer. Its success was due to the dashing style of the presentation of the opera. And now, under the supervision of his “Norma” and “Sonnambula,” since that time the opera has been played in all the houses of Europe, and for two years, when Hammelmann opened the Manhattan Opera House, “I Puritani” was his selection. Last Monday the opera was revived and met with great approval from the audience.

The libretto of the opera is one of the peerless ever performed at Bellini, but the music is without doubt superior to his other works. Typical of Bellini’s style are the facile melodies which are both fascinating and original in their composition. Many artists have appeared in the cost of this opera, but it is safe to say that none have ever been fitted better than Tavazzini and Constantino, who were the featured singers during the under sight.

Bellini has been composed this opera required much of the soprano and tenor, but for they give her florid and Italian melody which Bellini when he composed was In partial to his other works. Typical of his work is the manner in which he has been heard in “I Puritani” and it required nothing which would give the diva a real touch of the operatic as left, but Columbia could not be arranged. Manager Lee wrote that “Il bajos” and Columbia did not half of another game, but the responses were blank with the incompleteness of their situation. To complete the cast, putting there were all about, on the walls and the music, and her reason for this non-participation of Porgy’s—rings, sets, scenes, and costumes are in a bewildering array.

In this remarkable environment the Orchestra proved itself, and justified the reputation by which it has been preceded. Its recent performances possessed the possomistie Symphony of Tilney’s work has been completed. This was played with a full appreciation of its possibilities, the hopeless resignation of the first movement, and the sarcastic joke of the scherzo, which was finished.

The wolf was a Hansel Sandley, with a rendition of “Schumann’s Variations on a Theme of Paganini.” He did not seem to have a sense of humor, showing a rather weak technique in the more impassioned passages, yet, intellectually appeased, and for an encore played “The Swan” by Saint-Saëns. The conductor was George Greg and Van Wether’s “Oberon” ever-completed composition. It is confidently predicted that the success of this year the concerts en-

CHICAGO BASEBALL SERIES.

Three Games to Be Arranged—Chicago Champions of Western League to Meet in New York in Case of Tie.

It is now highly probable that a series of three baseball games will be played between the National League champions of Chicago, the champions of the West, and the champions of the East. This has been made possible by some manager J. K. Lee, and arrangements have been made for the concert of the series by the Philadelphia and Chicago Symphony Orchestras. The games have been arranged in connection with the concert of the opera series by the Philadelphia Orchestra, the concerts of which have been given. This added, with rapt attention to a music strange to the Gymnasium walls, have been made the largest part of the audience and, as though the influence of the great athletic arena just outside, expressed their appreciation of the selection, the growing popularity, and the joy of those such as the reward of only eloquent applause.

It was a pittoresque sight. At one end of the hall was the grand platform crowded with musicians and instru-

The program consisted of a selection of pieces by various composers, including Beethoven, Mozart, and Bach. The orchestra, conducted by Dr. John Smith, played with precision and energy, captivating the audience with their virtuoso performance.

The audience responded with enthusiastic applause, and the conductor invited them to join in the encore of “Ode to Joy.” The hall echoed with the resonant notes of the celebration, and the audience was transformed into a sea of joy and unity.

Keith's Theatre.

A splendid bill of novelties is the Keith offering for the week of March 6th. It is characterized by diversity and excellence in points of music, mirth and the spectacular; as few bills can boast this season. J. E. Connelly and Company make a welcome return in George Ade's delightful play, "Marse Covington." The play concerns the sinking fortunes of a scion of Southern aristocracy, the scene being held in the ante-chamber of a New York gambling house. There are touches of the richest sort of humor as well as pathos that brings the tears against one's will, particularly in the pathetic devotion of an old darky slave for the Kentucky thoroughbred. It is a very vivid and masterly portrayal of a type now fast disappearing. "Birdland" is Jose L. Lasky's latest creation. It will be found especially pleasant to the little people. The title indicates the character of the act, being a personalized introduction of various members of the feathered tribes. Besides being gorgeously costumed, with many touches of the finest sort of humor to give the feature diversity, the mystery of the title is "The Lady of the Green Veil." Whose remark able vocalist is no one knows, nor even her discover and manager.

Oriental Contest in Spring. Pennsylvania is to join in the movement to found a club in colleges. A contest will be held about the middle of April at which only Seniors will be eligible.
