SENIOR SINGING.

Owing to the mass meeting in the Triangle and to the fraternity meetings on Tuesday nights, singing on the Senior floor was inaugurated by the Pennataion. Class of 1899 last night under difficult circumstances, but a spirit of good fellowship and good cheer prevailed among the few that were present.

We cannot urge too strongly to the Seniors that these informal meetings be attended in a body. The custom, while new at Pennsylvania, most assuredly brings the men closer together in their last few days of their college life, and anything that accomplishes this much-desired object is worthy of the encouragement and the support of every upper classman.

Pennsylvania has only a few of the old customs where the fellows mingle freely among each other, and the ones that we have should be guarded and well preserved by all.

There is perhaps no one thing that endorses a college in so much as these informal meetings, where college chums meet and sing, and long after the gaiety and monotony of the undergraduate days are forgotten in the busy toils of life, the alumnus will remember the happy times spent with his classmates by recalling the Pennsylvania tradition of Senior singing.

At the spirit of how a well-met has often been clearly set before the Seniors, we are sure they will see the advantage of the good comradeship developed by Senior singing and will make the Senior gatherings great successes this year by leading their presence and in adding to grading out the old and familiar harmonious songs.

WE
Keith's Theatre.
It is certainly one of those laughing bills that is the Keith offering for the week of May 31. It abounds in comedy of every kind, from the knockabout to the subtle, and there is sufficient diversity in the musical and dramatic features to make it a truly mirthful picture. Harry Hulker makes his first vaudeville appearance in this city this week, presenting a tableau musical comedy called "He Was a Soldier Too." Harry Hulker has been a metropolitan favorite for many years, and his appearance in this interesting comedy—which, by the way, was founded upon incidents in Victor Herbert's opera, "Allegro"—has won him signal favor. In Boston recently the act was quite the talk of the town. Mr. Hulker's support includes the merry, droll comedienne, Henrietta Byrom, whose songs are particularly peculiar. Mr. Edwin Stevens, one of the most noted experts in English folk-lore and Dickensiana, as well as a most accomplished actor, makes a very welcome return and should be warmly received by every lover of the great novelist of English life. His beautiful comedies, "As Evening with Dickens," is truly one of the classics of vaudeville. Assisted by the dashing and winsome Tina Marshall, Mr. Stevens presents various characters from "David Copperfield," "Old Curiosity Shop," and the rest, making up the act. The vivacity, illustration of Crickhaddock, Reynoir, Browne and other celebrities of Dickens time is a feature of the Keith vaudeville program for the week of May 24th.
