New Work in Psychology.

Courses Rearranged and Increased—Supplementary Lectures.

FOR THE COMING YEAR the new courses offered in psychology have been rearranged and several new courses added. These changes have been made to meet the requirements of students desiring to study psychology in its practical applications to social work, education, medicine, law and the arts. The regular courses consisting a general outline of psychology and one additional course have now greatly increased by the supplementary lecture courses. Following is an outline of the courses now offered in psychology:

Courses in psychology in general, and of general interest in America by the New York Times on October 10, 1850, and to the London Times for 06,000, and are man's mortal value. It is understood that the Globe Theatre document has been sold to the New York Public Library for $10,000, and that the story will be syndicated in America by the Field, and in London by The Times. An article written by Shakespeare has also been published, the nature of which is not known.

In youth, notice the following: the new Tower will be the same as the Memorial Tower. As described in the College Bulletin of this week.
