OPERA AGAIN.

When the change in the management of the Opera House up Broad and Poplar streets was made, fear was entertained here on the campus that the reduction privilege formerly granted to University students would cease. But, thanks to the present manager of the Metropolitan, the same opportunities will be given us this season as were given last. Congratulations are due in several quarters. Opera lovers will be happy again, and The Pennsylvania is glad, indeed, to be an agent in such happiness.

Details connecting the number of evenings on which reduction cards may be used will be mentioned later. It is anticipated that more than one evening per week will be open to students at lowered prices. We will enjoy what we have at present, however, and say thanks most heartily.

GRANT US SILENCE!

Hornblower Hall has elev-a-tome rooms for all students with over-developed conversational tendencies. We would recommend, since such is the case, that the Library be no longer made the scene of so many monologues and diatribes. "Silence" signs are posted on every other brick over in that august pile, but they may as well be taken down and stuffed in the conversational furnace for all the need students take of them. Underclassmen are not the only offenders against the sensitive ears of would-be students. Even actual, graduate students seem to enjoy buzzing about the aloes and fuming among the magazine racks ready for similarly inclined conversation.

Mid-years particularly require concentration of brainstuff on the A. B. C of reduction, and if the enlarged whisppers don't cease in the Library there will be more NV's registered in Burnet's M.S. office than the typewriters are warranted to furnish. Miss Gardner cannot keep on with a continuous journey around the circle waging his battle on the part of the noisy ones if she is to fulfill all the requests for old magazines that the Wistar men hand in; we suggest, if the rascal and clatter does not stop, that the Trustees appoint a Library policeman to shift all tongue-wagging devotees to the cold, cold vestibule, and so permit the rest, earnest and sensitive student to do his or her duty by parents and aunts.

SOUND IN SPEECH AND MUSIC

Interesting Lecture by Arthur Gordon Webster in Houston Hall Yetterday Afternoon.

Dr. Arthur Gordon Webster delivered the twelfth lecture of the series on "Sound" yesterday afternoon in Houston Hall, this time being "Sound in Speech and Music."

As in his two former lectures, he used the apparatus in illustrating the photographs of sound waves. The lecture proper was divided into four component parts, "Registration of Sound," "Harmonic Analysis," "Mea-asurement of Acoustic Quantities" and the "Phonostrophe."

Under the first heading he described the resolution of any sound into the harmonic constituents and illustrated the actual wave in which the car vides and separates the different partials.

Probably the most interesting part of his lecture was in its conclusion, that is, the throwing of sound waves on a screen. This was affected by a small circle of light moved rapidly from side to side. As it moved back and forth, Dr. Webster was able to show the sound waves of his own voice. The machine which makes this possible is very delicate and requires much attention to keep it in

The explanation, "Ah!" spoken in different tones of voice threw different waves on the screen.

The first of the lecture was devoted to explaining the use of a machine invented by himself, the phonogram. Dr.
