strains which is not only uninvolved to the city, but which they could not offer, were it not for this University. It will doubtless be answered, by those of short-sighted judgment, that such an institution is paid for in a tuition fee settled upon by the University authorities shall be remembered that all such education is in the nature of charity and that the generous private citizens who have taken up their shoulders to conduct this University every year face a deficit of about $100,000. No well-informed person will contend for a moment that the large universities enroll themselves from the proceeds of tuitions received, if so, then why the necessity of the enormous endowments with which many of them are favored? Unfortunately, Pennsylvania is not particularly blessed with this kind of wealth. With an enrollment second only to Columbia University has the smallest endowment of any of the big Eastern Universities.

The receipts of fifteen thousand people receive treatment free of charge in the Dental clinics. They are asked to pay only for the materials used, and, in case they are not able to pay anything, they are given both service and materials without charge. Is this not in line with the considerations of the taxpayers? The report of the University Hospital for the year ending last September shows that nearly twenty thousand persons received medical treatment and nearly three thousand five hundred received surgical treatment free of charge to the patients. The Veterinary Settlement maintains a dispensary, where any injured animal may be taken at any time and be attended to without cost only to the University. The South Eastern Dispensary, at Eighth and Market Streets, where thousands of infants are brought safely into the world every year without expense to their parents, is conducted by the University. The Phipps Institute, which is not better than any other single institution in this city to wipe out tuberculosis, is another of the University's arrangements of service to the city. The Christian Association, conducted entirely by the University and its students, has established and maintains a Settlement House, where it does indefatigable work, and, in addition, has taken the name of the University, and, therefore, of necessity, that of Philadelphia to China, where it maintains a medical school and hospital. Moreover, it conducts regularly twenty-three classes for girls in schools which are thus taught the language and ideals of our country. Does this bring credit to Philadelphia? We might go on interminably, enumerating the manifold services rendered by this University to the city, but the limits referred to are more than sufficient to make it clear that neither the city of Philadelphia nor its citizens need feel apprehensive lest the University is being unjustly criticized. It is not the recognition of the goods received by the city by the University that the tract was granted, and there is certainly no equivocal reason for its return. There seems little justification for bearing that the City of Philadelphia show a local reluctance to interfere with the transfer which was so justifiable and wise from the standpoint of the city's best interests.

A selected staff of cooks edited Monday evening of the Syrnick's Dining Rooms. The following is an extract from a most pathetic editorial, "Why should only women of the minority be represented in the publication of a paper which so intimately concerns them?"

The arrangement of a crew race with Yale is a keen for satisfaction. It now remains to make of the event an annual affair instead of one recurring at irregular intervals. Undergraduate settlement at New Haven evidently frees the institution of a custom, if nothing stronger to make the race a recognized feature of the running year. A similar sentiment prevails among the Pennsylvania undergraduates. The situation is thus placed in the hands of the two neices.

SUIT AGAINST UNIVERSITY.

The principal objection raised in the recent suit against the validity of the transfer of the Commercial Museums also to the University, it is not in the consideration given by the University, is that the Councils are not legally entitled to hold funds or property as a private institution, such as it is asserted the University of Pennsylvania is. It would be futile and presumptuous to discuss here the legal points Involved in the case. Yet it may not be exceptional to take as to the correctness of their charges the worth the taxpayers who feel that the city is being grossly defrauded. It is claimed by them that the compensation of over one hundred thousand dollars, which is said to be the value of the property involved, is not sufficient to make it clear that neither the city of Philadelphia nor its citizens need feel apprehensive lest the University is being unjustly criticized. A TRUE COSMOPOLITAN NIGHT

Entertainment Scores Big Success.

Audience Sees Harem Skirt on Pictorial Trip Through China.

Everybody under the sun, except the weather man, contributed their part towards making last night's Cosmopolitan Club entertainment in Houston Hall a success. And a success it was, a great success, in spite of Phibs' effort to make it otherwise.

Students from all parts of the globe combined their wits and talents to induce the large audience.

The audiences were taken on pictorial trips through Asia, Europe and South America, with natives of the various countries as their guides. An extraordinary and startling fact was revealed to them on their tour through the Orient, when T. C. C. I. Co showed them that harem skirts had been worn by the women there for centuries, and that there was really nothing new at all about the supposedly novel apparel.

Incidentally, he convinced them that the Chinese women enjoyed greater freedom than her American sisters.

R. C. da Silva delighted the audience with his clever impersonations.

A. W. Lingen, one of "Uncle Sam's Medical Corps of Pennsylvania," did some first-class vaudeville dancing and trumpet acting, and is said to haveMask and Wig aspirations.

Sylvia Penniman advertisement and E. P. Park's vocal solo, together with the waltz and waltz selection by the famous Cosmopolitan and Latin-American Orchestras, secured the utmost thrill of even the drosel in the house.

K. T. Kerr, of Australia; V. R. Gabriel, of Paraguay; S. Wada, of Japan; and T. C. P. Qiao, of China, were the native guides employed in conducting the American travelers on the pictorial trips through the different countries.

Dr. G. P. Schaffner, President of the Cosmopolitan Club, presided. The committee in charge was composed of V. R. Gabriel, chairman; F. Y. Kim, B. M. Kerr and B. B. Chapman.

Lower Classmen Finally Agree on Date for Labor Union Argument.

The Fresh-Soph debate, after having been postponed a number of times, is finally to be held Monday night at 8 o'clock, in Price Hall Law Reading. The judges will be Prof. E. P. Church, Prof. W. E. Linglebauch and Dr. J. J. Lichtenberger.

This debate centers one point towards the Duke Trophy, and in addition, a prize of $10 is given to the winning team, as to be divided among the members of the team.

The question to be discussed is: "Resolved, That Labor Unions are, on the whole, beneficial to mankind."

The affirmative side will be represented by James McQuillen, R. J. Lang and G. B. Storer. The Freshmen will be represented by J. P. Cox, J. G. Maugosh and H. G. Adams.

ANOTHER MCKENZIE TALK.

Importance of Proper Physical Training to Growing Children was Topic.

"The Physical Education of Children" and the important part that environment plays in the various stages of physical development, were discussed yesterday by Dr. McKenzie in his weekly talk to the Leaders' Corps.

He divided childhood into three periods, the first from birth to about seven years of age, the one of greatest activity; from seven to twelve, when the child is exposed to the influence of other children; and the period from twelve to sixteen, when the relation with the communal community becomes established.

"It is most necessary," he said,"that every one be occupied and amusement such as sports or games be found, suitably in the period of development through which the child is passing."
