CENTRAL OF ATHLETIC WORLD

Franklin Field Can Claim That Distinction Now—Time and Attendance Records Sure to Be Broken.

Franklin Field and the University of Pennsylvania take the center of athletic and intercollegiate interest today and tomorrow, when record-breakers are to witness in every section of the country will compete for the highest place in the snare. Record will, in all probability, more records in some of them. Never before has the selection of the best men from every part of the country been made. Each man will, all in all, make the best of his ability to please the executive committee, and, if given a chance, he will be forced to the limit of his ability.

The relay races are the feature of today's schedule, and to compete with this race are the thirty-two miles of records in the student classes. The University of Pennsylvania, Michigan, and Harvard are all sending fast teams for the relay, and each team will do their best. The races are to be run in a measured mile, and the mile relays, threatening seriously the intercollegiate records in these races.

Second in interest to the relays, but far from being of minor character, is the feature and nucleus of the races, comes the track meet. The University, whose tremendous championship performances are entered, and the New Jersey, whose games are particularly in danger, when almost every team is in a position to knock them out at any point.

Apart from the interest that Nature shows to the field for the most favorable sunshine, the most interesting sport to be taken down to the University, is the selection of the many schools representing various sections of the country. Over twenty of these teams will make the full list number in the base, and the University, representing schools having sent teams and the University of Pennsylvania, with the single men, which will swell this number and make the whole of one of the best of the Eastern and Western

DR. FRANK G. SPECK RETURNS
Spent a Month Among Montagnais Indians in Northern Quebec—Brings Back Interesting Collection.

Dr. Frank G. Speck, Assistant Professor of Archaeology, returned to the Museum yesterday, after a month's stay in the freezing north among the Montagnais Indians, on Lake St. John, in Northern Quebec. He brought with him many interesting tales of the habits and customs of the Indians, two camera-cines, phonographic records of their songs, a large collection of their cooking utensils, articles of domestic use, hunting implements and many other articles of ethnological interest and importance. The exhibition will be placed on exhibition in the American section of the Museum.

Dr. Speck lived among a score of families on Lake St. John who had not gone away to the hunting grounds to spend the winter, as had practically the entire people. He said that the people had to tribal organization whatever, and that the hundreds of families went away to hunt during nine months of the year in the northern forests and returned in the summer to sell their furs. He said that they were underfed, as they had to depend entirely on their hunting and fishing for a livelihood. An Indian friend of Dr. Speck, who was away on the winter's hunt at the time of his arrival, came four hundred miles to see him, and on the way he was forced to boil the skins, which he was going to sell, and his breeches and moccasins, to make bread to keep from starving. Dr. Speck said that it was not at all unusual for them to resort to their clothes to make soup out of, as did not injure them to have them boiled. Dr. Speck has pictures of the children standing barefooted in the snow. He said that in the winter, when they are out on their hunts, they live in canvas tents with the thermometer 40 and 50 degrees below zero.

Last Thursday, Professor Speck drove a horse and sleigh a distance of ten to fifteen miles and return on Lake St. John. On that day the horse sank up to his middle in the sleigh box that had been honey-combed by the Spring rains. Dr. Speck said that the moose and bears seem to be plentiful, although he said there were not many caribou. He said he saw a large number of black foxes.
