BASE BALL EXCITES DOMINIES

Wharton Faculty Challenges Their Arts Brothers to a Nine-Inning Game on Decoration Day.

There may be no examinations this year. At least this is true of the Wharton School and the Arts and Science Department, unless some one of the older instructors in those schools forget very soon that one time in their lives before the atmosphere of the classroom gets to their throwing slips, they were wont to put up a game of baseball that would make the world's champions look like a Varsity chose team. Not content with making every pedagogue in their own training quarters with a wild, world fever, the Wharton fans yesterday hurled a defl into the Arts and Science rang during the dignitaries of College Hall to try conclusions in a nine-inning go on Decoration Day.

Now the Arts Faculty, with a few honourable exceptions, are base ball mad and greatly uprooted over the possibility of realizing their rivals in the Business Department. It is planned to give the proceeds from this, and also from the game with the Seniors, to the student's Ward in the University Hospital.

This base ball enthusiasm originated in a singular way. The story goes that Professor Lichtscheider, who was formerly a professional ball player in the West, was induced in one of his classes that the college men of his time were more virile and better athletes than the students of today. A. T. Cameron took issue with this statement and voluntioned the proposition that a base ball team picked from the Wharton School Seniors could make a team from the faculty look like "a bunch of beagles.

The challenge was accepted on the spot, and Professor Lichtscheider constituted himself a captain and then began to look for a team. The result appears a little ridiculous on paper, the Lichtscheider says they can't be beat. Professors Patterson, Neuring, Kelby, Schmidt, Pernet, Cullenberg, Smith, Robie and even Director Young have turned out for practice.

In the Arts Department, Drs. W. W. Forster, K. E. Twining and Arthur Holmes, of the Psychological Department, are the nucleus of a team that is still in embryo. Dr. Lightner Widow is the only member of the Psychological staff who refuses to be作风 up the spread of the diamond. Professors Weigandt, T. D. O'Brien, Frank, Keesie and a number of inner instructors have all been asked to try out for the team, and it is expected that a dozen more will re-

DENTAL RECORD NOVELTIES.

Year Book Appears Monday with Several Unusual Departments.

Editor-in-Chief Stout announced yesterday that the Dental Senior Record would be published and placed on sale in the office of the department on Monday.

This year's Record is dedicated to Charles Boyd Turner, A.B., D.D.S., Professor of Transient Dental and Metallurgy. Dr. Turner has for years been prominently connected with both the administrative and pedagogical branches of the Dental Department. He is a member of the Delta Rho Dental Fraternity and many well-known honor societies.

Besides the customary individual inscriptions of each member of the graduating class and the pictures and de-serations of purely local activities, this volume of the Record will contain many new features. Its scope is much broader than the previous Dental Publications, and it is filled with cuts of the various major and minor societies in these schools, the Math and Wic, the Minot and other lesser societies. There are no less than three distinctly separate sections. The first of these, "The Class Bulletin Box," gives the result of voting on the highest members of the class who are most conspicuous for certain qualities. The other two originalities are the "Polish Bulletin," a history of the class gotten up in the form of a theatre program, and a "regalia" gallery of the class individual celebrations.
