Mike Murphy Home

For Short Visit
Train Will Rest at Least Two More Weeks in Philadelphia, Spring Track Work.

May Play the "Phillies."
"Mike" Murphy returned to Philadelphia Friday, to spend Sunday with his family, at 1721 Elliott street. "Mike," has been staying at Brownsville, N. J., for the past two weeks, recuperating from the effects of a very severe cold which he caught late in March and early April.

The Jersey air and the pleasant climate of the "spare" has greatly improved his health, and when seen at home, "Mike" was in good spirits. Doctor Torrey, the former University Hospital star, has been watching Murphy, and it was at his advice that "Mike" sought out the "wills of New Jersey."

Plates for the coming track season are already being formed by "Mike" himself said. "As soon as I am completely well, I shall tour the states, to the hide to work hard and hard."

Managers of the Big Four teams, Fredrick, who conferred with "Mike" last night at second base, made preparations for the league to start will surface almost immediately. At present the actual track work is in "standstill." "Mike" returns today to "the plate" in public. Also he will remain at least two weeks. Extremely cold and rheumatism have delayed him a semestreval for several months.

The staff has impressed Murphy with their restful and recuperative powers that he, the third baseman, will have to take a trip to get into condition, "Mike" will vote for Brown. Murphy.

While the announcement was made in the Philadelphia Committee you should be on guard for the number of tickets, as so flush the Philadelphia organizers will point out. Finally our interest in the country, over the start of the season, is the first. However, the snow fall and rain made walking more difficult, but that only a few tickets were disposed of is a matter of regret.

The second team is a few choice seats away from being sold, and if anyone will be at any time at The Pennsylvania Hotel, we will be glad to help.

The Intercollegiate Harmony Commission has announced that the only known to the committee that will be sold will be a "must" to the fans.

THE ORCHESTRA.

There are so many things of interest to students during the month of January that it is hardly reasonable to expect them to participate in everything. The approaching mid-years seem to agree deadlier every day, and the list of exams, term papers and the like that are scheduled in coming weeks is astounding. Nevertheless, attention should be centered to one event that affords all the qualities of interest, amusement and education, and which is not to be denied to anyone because of financial reasons. Few opportunities are offered to hear what is best in the world of art at such a ridiculously low figure as the price of a social event. At least students who have never been in the Philadelphia Orchestra have a chance to hear it. The display of talent is of highest order. Two of the best musicians in the country have been chosen as soloists, while the main program is one that can not only help but be pleasing to everyone. Students who miss this affair are denying themselves a treat that is worth going miles to hear.

Scots for the opera are unattainable this week and the Orchestra fills the vacancy nicely. It is to be hoped that the house is better filled with students than an average house at the Metropolitan.

Famous Art Collection May Be Seen by Students for Limited Time.

The most famous collection of art of the North American Indian is now on exhibition in the rotunda of the University Museum. It is the most unique collection of its kind ever assembled together of any people. The collection in the Museum, together with the slides of Mr. Curtis, represents work upon which more than one million and a half dollars have been spent. The exhibit will remain at the Museum for a limited time. Many undergraduates are taking advantage of the opportunity to see it. It is open from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. and from 2 to 6 P.M. Sunday.

Mr. Curtis will deliver his lecture, "The Vine and a Vanishing Race," Monday evening, January 13, at the Academy of Music. Besides a vast number of wonderful slides representing Indian life, customs, amusements and strange religious rites, there will be a special program of Indian music.

As the demand for tickets for this entertainment is far in excess of the capacity of the Academy of Music, students wishing to obtain tickets must get them by applying in advance to the University Museum. The prices range from $2 for box seats down to 25 cents for the amphitheatre.
