PHILADELPHIA, FRIDAY, MAY 13, 1912

CIVILS BANQUET.

Protest Smith and Other Faculty Men Speak at Annual Feast of Engineers Society.

The Engineering Society held its third annual banquet last night at Navarro's, with a large number of members and their guests present. A short speech, made by Professor W. S. Holt, President of the Society, opened the meeting, and was followed by a series of addresses by other members.

On the part of the students, the chief features of the evening were the addresses by Professor W. S. Holt and Professor E. W. White.

The President of the Society, who was introduced by Professor W. S. Holt, spoke on the subject of "The Engineering Profession," and in the course of his remarks, the importance of education and training in the engineering profession was emphasized. He pointed out that the engineering profession was one of the most important in modern society, and that it was essential that engineers be well trained and thoroughly prepared for their work.

The other addresses were made by Professor W. S. Holt, President of the Society, and Professor E. W. White, who spoke on the subject of "Engineering Education." The addresses were given in the presence of a large and interested audience, and were well received. The meeting was adjourned after the addresses, and the guests were invited to take part in the banquet.

The banquets were held at Navarro's, and were attended by a large number of members and their guests. The atmosphere was one of cordiality and good fellowship, and the evening was a great success.
