BRITISH WAR FILMS PROVE AN UNQUALIFIED SUCCESS

Exciting Scenes Throng on Screen

Big Audience to Applause
Mystery Tonight.

In spirit of the peace celebrations in other parts of the city last night, the showing of official British war pictures, under the auspices of the Christian Association, was well attended. The pictures, which gave scenes of the battle of Cambrai, were secured by courtesy of the Bureau of Commercial Relations at Washington.

The pictures of England's Colonial troops marching to the front brought a round of applause from the audience, as did also the showing of ships of the Royal Navy, and a model of a British warship, which was a special feature of the series. Among other interesting scenes were the tanks going into action, and several "flashes" of the British forces which brought down the enemy in the range.

The pictures showed a tank, crossing a trench breach, lumbering in and up the other side. Views of trench mortars were shown on the screen, being operated at full speed, in the height of battle.

Motor-machine gun battalions were deployed going into action under heavy fire. Two men were required to operate each outfit, the guns being mounted on a motorcycle sidecar. The gradually increasing pressure was shown in a vivid manner, up to the time when the barrage reached such intensity that it was no longer possible to photograph.

In the third reel, observation balloons were pictured being dropped and sent up for range observation work.

Another feature was the showing of detailed operation of the anti-aircraft guns. A crew of five or six men stood by to hurry the loaded projectiles to the breech and get the empty shells out of the way to quick order.

No time was allowed for the men to step back, but the trigger was pulled almost with the locking of the breech.

One of the most impressive of the longer "flashes" was the depiction of the trench breach from the point of England marching to the front. With vim and man, the sturdy British warriors "carried on," to use their own phrase, to a final victory.

Not enhanced by three successive days and nights of forced marching, they threw themselves into the battle to stop the German hordes without a rest.

Tonight the Christian Association will give a program, the nature of which is not known, beyond the fact that the title has been announced as the "Man Who Was in and Came Back Again." No further details can be obtained, and a well of mystery surrounds the program.

WHARTON DEAN TO WORK ON ARISING PEACE PROBLEMS

"Feeling a stirring world, the creaking of machinery, and the thunder Americanism of all foreign-born persons living in this country are the three great problems which confront Americans on the eve of peace," states Dean McClellan, of the Wharton School, who has been chosen Chief of the Division of Organized Cooperation of the Food Administration, and also Director of Public Education of the National Defense Council.

McClellan pointed out the necessity of the United States supporting the European nations in the coming families period, so that reconstruction may not be retarded.

"With the demobilization of the huge armed forces and the still larger army of war workers, peacebuilding will be attempted by many unscrupulous firms. How to avoid and diminish as much as possible the influence to those people is the problem of the committee," he said. Dean McClellan, of the Wharton School.

The third problem before the department under the leadership of Dr. McClellan is the Americanizing of aliens living in this country, the war having interposed (as we have been permitted to believe) allies to the extent we thought we had. It is planned to further this effort by private education on practical lines, and by reaching every foreigner.

The Department on Public Education will also distribute information concerning the work done by the Christian Association in the World War, and prepare the public mind for the coming peace tests.
