Dr. Huebner Explains War Risk Insurance

the face of the policy is also paid to the beneficiary in 240 monthly installments.

The second recommended type is the twenty-year payment life policy. It is practically the same as a whole life policy, but instead of paying premiums for life, they are paid for twenty years. The premium at age 20 is $28.72 per $1,000. At maturity $10,000—three times the $3,333.33 paid in premiums—is paid.

The third type is the long-term endowment policy. It matures at age 62, and for a man 39 years old it is really a 43-year endowment. According to the War Risk Department, a man is considered economically dead at the age of 62, and has chosen that age as time of maturity for the policy. This is the most expensive form of insurance, and Dr. Huebner advises only those men who can afford to pay the highest premiums to take out this policy.

When asked which type of policy he recommended for students, Dr. Huebner stated that students in average financial circumstances should convert their insurance into the twenty-year payment life policy, but those men who have dependents or who lack the means should take out the whole life policy. He also explained the advantages of an endowment policy over a whole life policy.
