The war is over. The period of reconstruction has begun. This is an era of great hope and a period of new opportunity. In less than two months' time the armistice was signed and we find our armed military forces on their way home. The news was like the announcement of a Garden Party to the millions who are trying to rebuild their lives after the costly luxury of a mistake.

The Press Association that has been in operation almost continuously since the beginning of the war. There will be plenty of the news while the war is over. When we consider the proposals before us, we shall be able to give them due consideration.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt

Tributes Paid Ex-President, Who Died
Yesterday at Oyster Bay of Pulmonary Embolism.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt died in his sleep in his home at Oyster Bay, New York, early yesterday. The immediate cause of death was pulmonary embolism, or lodgment in the lung of a clot from a broken vein.

He had many friends at the University, and on February 22, 1901, he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. At the same time he delivered the University Day Oration at the Academy of Music, his address being "Some Maxims of Washington."

Wherever he went to Philadelphia, he was entertained at the home of one of University friends, among them the late Dr. J. William White, a trustee. Mr. Robinson, secretary of the University, and William Draper Lewis, of the Law School faculty. Mr. Roosevelt also frequently attended the Army and Navy games, which were played on Franklin Field for so many years.

In fact, it was largely through his efforts that the Army and Navy teams were brought together on Franklin Field. William Draper Lewis, of the Law School, paid a fitting tribute to Mr. Roosevelt as soon as he learned of his death.

"Theodore Roosevelt was not only one of the greatest of Americans," said Dr. Lewis, "but he was one of the greatest of all times. His life has been crowded with events of public moment. There is a long record of accomplished good for America to his credit. But that which will make his outstanding figure of his time is the fact that to him, more than to any other man, and as much as to any man as possible is due the survival against the selfish commercial illusions of the latter part of the nineteenth century, the better and broader social movement of the present."

"Today all will be enriched by the universal deep sense of personal loss, not in the least dependent on personal acquaintance. For the American people of whatever political faith, with comparatively few exceptions, felt that they knew this robust, healthful, strong American."

"To those who were privileged to come into close personal contact with him, there is a still deeper sense of loss in his death. It was the reward of his high thinking and clean and simple living that those who knew him best loved him most."

"Thomas Robinson, secretary of the University, gave out the following statement last night:"

"I consider that Theodore Roosevelt was the greatest American. Purity alone can estimate how irreparable is the loss of such a leader at such a critical time in the history of the nation and of the world."

"A generation elapsed before America fully appreciated how great a calamity was the untimely death of Lincoln. Roosevelt's fight for the ideals which Lincoln held and fought for was for American ideals and to maintain the goodwill of American life. The greatest tribute that the living can pay his memory is to take up the mantling torch he so bravely bore and go on with the fight for the ideals which he so nobly championed."

F. Edward F. Smith eulogized Roosevelt as a man and speaker and his life and alma mater. Speaking of the patriotism, dedication, and devotion to life of Roosevelt, the House and Senate of the United States adjourned for the day to honor him and appointed a committee to attend the funeral.
