CONVICTIONS.

Some states' court systems on our convictions when perhaps we should speak of our opinions or our prejudices, or even our opinions. These are differences.

A man with true convictions is not static; he is dynamic. He inspires in others that opinion which becomes conviction. Most people have mental or emotional energy enough to convert their opinions into convictions.

University men and women should cultivate this habit of having convictions. They should try to overcome the mental laziness—the emotional laziness that characterizes the merely indolent human being.

They should acquire convictions that give strength to character and a purpose to existence. The man of conviction is the man of action, personality, and success.

Certainly we are in favor of the college holding prominent positions in all University activities, but don't forget that this is April fool's day.
