ROWING UNDER DIFFICULTIES

There is very little choice to be made between our various athletes.

Whether a man is out for one of the major sports or one of the minor sports, the same conditions as before dictate him in entering the competition. He goes "out," because he likes the sport; wants to develop his body; and is vitally interested in accomplishing something for Pennsylvania. All things being equal, we must admire all alike.

One very notable case appears this season, however, where all things are not equal. Because of depletion conditions on the Schuylkill, it is necessary for a crew man to possess extraordinary rowing ability if he is to enter the competition.

The results of the Pennsylvania Gazette's efforts to get some alumni to come forward with an offer to build a new boat house are most commendable.

The problem is really one for the graduands, as neither the students nor the Athletic Association have the wherewithal to solve the problem. The ungraduated can take on this task of spirit being demonstrated by the crew men, however, and when the regattas come, let us have the spirit that was shown by the Schuylkill and cheer loudly.

Any success which the various clubs enjoy this year will be especially deserved.

"Gommy" can't see it. He can't figure how fish-food can be turned into a $5.50 shirt.

But, sir, "Gommy" may be short on epotomology but he is long on taste.

Dear Reader:

I am writing to you because I am a student at your school and I am interested in your opinion about a recent event that occurred on campus.

Recently, there was a debate held between two rival fraternities, Phi Gamma Delta and Sigma Chi. The debate was held in Houston Hall and was attended by a large number of students. The Phi Gamma Delta team was led by a member of the school's basketball team, and the Sigma Chi team was led by a member of the school's baseball team.

The debate was moderated by a former faculty member of the school, and the audience was made up of students, faculty, and alumni. The debate was激烈 and well-attended, and it provided a great opportunity for students to engage in intellectual discourse.

If you have any thoughts or opinions on this matter, I would appreciate it if you could share them with me. I am always interested in hearing different perspectives and ideas.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
