PRIZE, THREE CENTS

FAST NAVY EIGHT DEFEATS VARSITY

Unable to increase Strokes at Finish, First Best Lanes by Margin of Four Lengths

JUNIOR VARSITY WINS CONTEST

Unable to raise the stroke in the last half mile for the spurt, the Varsity lost a hard-fought race to the Annapolis Varsity crew in Saturday's regatta. The Varsity moved in pace line, covering the course in only one second less than the Junior Varsity. The contest between the Junior eight was won by the Red and Blue, however, in the interesting race of the day, a new Varsity record was also taken by the Midshipmen, the only local crew to exceed the 34-minute mark in the ten-lane race.

The races will be off with an exception by 30 minutes, and St. Louis setting the pace for the first mile of the affair at the fifteen-minute mark. The boundaries of the course every hundred yards will be marked.

The Naval Academy, in connection with the Cameron, 100 yard dash set by Stimson's and for the remaining events will be able to afford an advantage. The splendid cast is far in advance of any other school,
A NEED AND A REMEDY

Because we are dealing with the resignation of Professor J. Russell Smith has brought forth many old facts, some new; many false facts, some truths. It is necessary to analyze the information that educators of our country are inadequately compensated for their knowledge and labors. And this is an old fact that we voice as a summary for the entire nation, to face. Then follows the exposure that Pennsylvania educators are, in many instances, rewarded to a degree comparable unreasonably with salaries received at kindred institutions. Dr. Penniman's offhand statement notwithstanding the fact that few educators have been made rich, many did not. And so statements have run on, ad infinitum. Everyone has seemed most anxious to air his views and give the impression that he had some claim to mind be quoted. What we need, however, is not so much a recounting of conditions, generally understood, but a discussion of a remedy.

What everyone wants to see is a discontinuation of further resignations among faculty members. There is not one thing which will bring this about. That one thing is money. Not that our instructors are money-mad. If such were the case we would have no reason to lose them. But the compensation for their teaching comes from that undescribable something which we call "love of profession." This "something" will always be a part of the teacher's work, but it cannot be made too large a part. Creditors do not accept in payment of legitimately contracted debts. The remuneration is a necessity.

What money may be gotten in one of three ways. Tuition may be increased, endowment funds may be augmented, but it is a very difficult thing to do in a state for further support. The problem is a strenuous one, and will undoubtedly only come up to the mind of every one as the Board of Trustees' meeting today. The question must be settled by this body. Certain facts which should appear most present as they discuss the situation, however, are these: Pennsylvania has been in a great influx, chiefly because of her admirable faculty. The teaching staff, after all, is the determining factor in considering the worth of any educational institution, and to one appreciates more than the students themselves the incalculable value of our faculty's factor as it now exists. Pennsylvania will not continue in her greatness, therefore, if, after one, these powerful minds are cut loose and drift away to business life or other universities. We have been so well cared for in the past that there is no reason to believe anyone will be neglected in the future; but it is just as well that those who control the University be alive to these large issues.

In accepting the resignation of Dr. Smith, the University is turning over to Columbia a loyal alumnus, a competent teacher and a true friend. We shall feel keenly his absence here, but we wish him every success therein. It is regrettable, indeed, that Mr. Houston has expressed himself so apparently withoutaucoup regret regarding Dr. Smith's teaching in Germany. Most of the remarks made have been discounted because of their very nature. Dr. Smith should have been able to enjoy the same unalike relations which have characterized his long term of service here on the campus. Incidentally, if the Geography and Industry Department be to anything more than a name next year, it would be well for those in charge of University affairs to attempt to secure the return of Dr. J. H. White. It will mean the expenditure of considerable effort, but it will be well worth while.

OUR OLD GENERAL AND THE NEW

Captain Charles T. Griffin, who has been in charge of military matters at Pennsylvania for so long, has decided to return to civil life. He carries from our midst the respect and the good wishes and the friendship of all, for in his months of service here on the campus we have learned to admire his ability, respect his power and appreciate his comradeship. Our one hope is that he may be able to achieve success in the business world as readily and as surely as he was prone to in military life.

The article is a review of a lecture on Pennsylvania can well afford to have more leadership in the United States entered the war, in 1917. Since that time he has acted as consultant in surgical research to the C. F. P.

RUSSIAN BLACKJACK Service.
To have received two falls from an airplane, one at a height of 4,000 feet and one at a height of 6,000 feet, was the experience of Lieut. Leon Tour Pavolcovsky, who recently returned from France and is now at the Foreign Students' House on Spruce street. Lieut. Pavolcovsky served in both the Russian and French armies, and saw service on the western front in Greece. At present he is enrolled in the Medical School.

Hospital Unit on Way Home.
In a telegram sent to his wife, Lieutenant-Colonel J. B. Carnett, who commands the University of Pennsylvania Hospital Unit in France, stated that the medical officers and nurses of that unit are now on their way home. The officers sailed from Brest on the "Priscilla," and the nurses on the "Victoria." Fifteen nurses are still with the Army of Occupation, as are also the enlisted Pennsylvania men of the unit.

Former Student Honored.
In recognition of his efficient service in the Ambulance Corps, John H. McFadden, Jr., a former student at the University, has been awarded the Cross of the Legion of Honor. McFadden enlisted in the corps during the early days of the war and served as an ambulance driver, but later became treasurer of the fund which supports the field service and on two occasions returned to America to enlist financial aid for the work.
