THINK FOR THOUGHTS SAKE.

Major varsity oarsmen are being advised three days as to the selection of a new President. It should be remembered that Dr. Dean's resignation has not yet been accepted, and he may be induced to retain his position, relieved of some of his more arduous realities.

A new feature which has arisen for the discussion is the action taken by various departmental faculties who have submitted resolutions voicing their ideas as to the future policy of the University. This sudden breaking into the forefront by our faculties seems somewhat, and their unhappily not be casually passed over by the trustees. Certainly the teachers of a great institution such as we have should have some voice in the forming of basic principles to govern the policy of the University, their standpoint is not the financial, but rather the academic one, but we are really here to serve the students' sake, and it seems that our governing body should not take a little thing that underlies something much bigger.

In defense of his own people, Dr. Dean was not entirely blameless. He whatever the article, The point we wish to bring to your notice is that our own faculties are crisis out against each conditions in their present resolutions supporting and not a hardening way for President.

After seeing a Wharton School Junior spell "assets" with an "e" at the end, I would suggest as a precaution spelling should be added to the curriculum.

We are always ready to talk with young men about entering the life insurance business and connecting themselves with this Company.

There has never been a time when life insurance has had such popular favor as now; nor when people are so dependent upon life insurance as now. It is generally recognized as a necessity. Because of these conditions the business opens a great opportunity for young men starting in life, requiring no invested capital and offering features such as few lines of business offer.

A Pioneer in the Stoker Field

Westinghouse was one of the first among the pioneers in the stoker field. Although power stations have grown to enormous size with sudden peak loads, in some instances reaching as high as 300 and 400 cubic feet per minute, the original design of the Westinghouse boiler Stoker remains today practically the same as it was thirty-five years ago and that it still retains its first place position in the combustion field. This speaks for the accuracy of the original design. The Boney Stoker is particularly suitable for factory power demands with moderate variations of 25 to 50%, and for a wide range of fuel obliquity. Simple design, low cost and ease of installation strongly recommend it for plants of moderate size. Over three million horsepower have been installed. Industrial expansion, however, has brought many changes in power plant practice since 1887. Today mechanical stokers are called upon to burn everything from coal to oil and many mills down to refuse. They are also called upon to meet the sudden and emergent steam demands. Hence, two additional stokers were added, and our line now includes the Chain Stoker, particularly adapted to the burning of low-grade, high-sulphur; and the Under, better Stoker, which is equipped in its ability to handle the sudden and emergent overloads. Westinghouse is the pioneer in the field of central station service with the highest degree of efficiency.

It is a fact of vital importance to the stoker buyer that we manufacture the three general types, because stoker application should be approached with an open mind, and the stoker manufacturer should be guided in his recommendations partly to the facts that develop from a study of fuel and load requirements.
