Pennsylvania Men Find Ancient Tomb

Representing the University, seventeen men, under the leadership of Dr. George Byam Garden, director of the University museum, came to Bethlehem, Palestine, to make an archaeological excavation. The excavation was made under the direction of Dr. Clarence H. Fisher.

Attitudes are said to have been formed by the excavations of the children in Bethlehem at the time when the search was made. The discovery of the tomb is one of the most important that has been made in the last few years of the New East.

Dr. Fisher also sent word that he had found the Tomb of King Red of the Philistines. This announcement startled the historians who have been perplexed concerning the actual burial place of Red's sons.

Bethlehem is said to be rich in ancient history as the region is so far away from any great city. The excavations will continue and reports of progress will be forwarded from time to time.

AN OVERLONG COMPETITION

The dispensable state of offices now existing to virtually all management positions where managers and their assistants are forced to shoulder the heavy burdens of national work with but a handful of candidates may be attributed in part to an apparent lack of spirit among the Class of 23, but to charge this failure wholly to the Class would be doing it a dISservice. A number of today are faced with a situation in regard to managerial competitions unlike that which any previous class has been obliged to meet, and, when this situation is fully realized, the reluctance among the Sophomores to enter these competitions will be hardly surprising.

In former years managerial competitions were intensive struggles confined to a few months or, in some cases, the entire junior and senior year. From these the most successful candidates emerged as assistant manager while the "runner-up" was chosen Formal manager for the ensuing year. The remaining candidates were dropped and left free to partici-patc in whatever activity they might choose.

Now, however, the system is materially altered. The Sophomore competition remains as before, but, in addition, the major sports, are taken three or four more to act as assistant managers. These men are obliged to compete for an entire year longer before one of them can be assured of the managerialship. For the victor the struggle is well worth while, but what of the others? They have devoted two years of intensive work toward this activity, and yet in their Senior year they find nothing to reward years of intensive work toward this activity, and yet in their Senior year they find nothing to reward their efforts.

In any event the system is materially altered. The

FRESHMEN OFFICERS

Today marks the introduction of the Class of 23 to what is commonly denoted by the alluring title of "campus politics," and we utter the insipid word of caution. Upon each succeeding Freshman class devolves the responsibility for raising the standards of official conduct, and simply by causing your predecessors to shrink from your duties you are not to assume that he leaves well alone is a justifiable practice.

No, to be sincerely criticized you must exert all your resources in a more meagre ability will be rewarded with a slogan more with mud. Doubtless organization is a prereq tus to any previous class has been obliged to meet, and,

when this situation is fully realized, the reluctance
among the Sophomores to enter these competitions will be

Yes! Writing without effort!

What George S. Parker has achieved for students with the 25-Year Duofold

This lacquer-red pen with jet black tips is not only handsomer than gold—it's a perfect classroom for the college man or boy.

Better permanence for every one—without effort or fatigue—on any paper—at study at classrooms at lectures.

Mr. Parker achieved it by producing a native fluid point as smooth and feel-educing as a jewel bearing, and a leak-proof barrel with a grip that is balanced with scientific precision and symmetry.

Such perfect pen and super-smoothness in writing relieves the nerves of tension. The Duofold glides under your subconscious direction as its own balanced weight!

You think of only what you are writing—not here. So your thoughts come easier, clearer, more composed.

We will be happy to have your Duofold for 39 days to demonstra-crane. You'll never be content to write the old way
