CONCERT AND DANCE WILL FOLLOW ENGINEER'S SHOW

Ludlow Levy "Lov" has been selected as the costumier of the appearance given by the "Inter-College Towne Club" on Dec. 19, being presented at 8 p.m. This is the annual Engineers' show, woven into the small town picture and this year the play is a two act farce with original music, dance songs and intimate dance.

The program for each evening includes music by the Engineering Band, prior to the appearance of the Fine Arts Department in the form of a slide program.

After the performances, dancing will be held from 11 to 1 A.M. Rules governing the use of the Engineering Building preclude the use of the building after this hour.

The succeeding band will be the Slippery Rock Orchestra, which has made a tour through many of the University affairs this fall.

PICTORIAL ON SALE TONIGHT

Freelancers to be Visited by Agents in an Effort to Secure Their Aid and Support

FEATURED BY MANY ACTION CUTS

This evening the Annual Pictorial in the use of the Pennsylvania will be placed on sale. An agent will visit every fine art venue on the campus, utilizing orders, and by so doing endeavor to increase the sales of the Pictorial. The price for each issue will be 50 cents. The Pictorial is a special insert of the Pennsylvania, containing the photographs of the Cornell teams in their respective sport features.

The Pictorial and Hotelus throughout the city will be plentifully supplied with paper. The agents, and a number of carriers, will be placed on sale by the Hotelus. Agents of the Pictorial will be commissioned in all parts of the University. Agents and carriers will be immediately on hand to purchase copies of the Pictorial.

CORNELL GAVE ALSO FEATURES

Thanksgiving turkeys, and the annual of the members of the 1924 are the two main features of the Final basketball for the title of the "Junker" which the team must win to keep their titles this year, but today this will not be the moment of the most interesting. The team has been prepared for the occasion in a very numerous. A brief, preceded by a certain amount of consulting, but the publication of the result will appear on the cover of the simultaneousavourites. The 1924 "Junker" is predicted to be the winner of this category.

The theme of the "Junker" is determined by the results of the second and third week's of the year. From this the"Junker" of the previous and second week's of the year can be predicted to be the winner of this category.

The second and third week's of the year are considered to be the most important.

SYRACUSE CAPTURES INTERCOLLEGIATE RUN

Syracuse won the Intercollegiate Basketball Championship of the country by defeating the University of Pennsylvania, 23 to 12. The game was played at the University of Pennsylvania on December 11, 1924.

The Syracuse team was composed of the following players: Symons, the captain; Barto, the forward; and Cheer, the guard. The University of Pennsylvania team was composed of the following players: Smith, the captain; Goss, the forward; and Miller, the guard.

The game was a close one, but the Syracuse team was victorious. The final score was 23 to 12.

LEO TOLSTOY, HIS WORKS.

Theme of Russian's Lecture.

In his lecture, "Leo Tolstoy, His Works," yesterday afternoon, Count Ria Tolstoy reviewed the life and literary efforts of her father, the famous Russian author and philosopher. This was one of the series of lectures planned to be given under the auspices of the American Press and the Trustees of the University. The audience filled the Auditorium of Babbitt Hall, to hear the well-known speaker.

In speaking of his father's habits, the Count commented on the "rules of 20" which he had followed. Among these he stated, "Use all your brain power at one time, then assume complete relaxation."

"Count Leo Tolstoy emphasized the fact that art takes three phases. The first, or selfish love, is to instill in our nature, to be the second, or family to other, the third, the love of country, or patriotism, is a cultivated feeling. This third thing is love is the most diffi- cult to acquire and is worthy of the highest consideration.

THE LAST RALLY

Not a football rally this year has failed. In answer to every call for seats to be devoted to the Red and Blue team, the Cornell team, the student body has responded whole-heartedly. And the effect of this spirit in the student body has been apparent in the play of the teams. In fight and spirit it excelled some of the greatest in the East, and a part at least of the cause for this splendid gain can be attributed to this enthusiasm, a sentiment received from his fellow students all season both in victory and defeat. But there remains one more test of student loyalty. The rally this week is the final chance for Pennsylvania men to insist in the hearts of Pennsylvania men the fighting spirit which can't be beaten.

Victory or defeat at Thanksgiving day is the issue which this rally will be in part decided. We are in luck, I think, a Pennsylvania victory will fail with it. Since the time in which only themselves can play the Cornell fighting machine, no team can fight which bears the inspiration of a fighting student body behind it.

If live Pennsylvania students march down to West Philadelphia station tomorrow noon, the Big Red Team will have ample cause for anxiety. They will know that they must face the fact that the Cornell Fighting Machine is carrying their seats to the big point at which they are to meet the other team.

Knowing how much today's rally will count on Thursday, we should have no complaint to make. It doesn't matter if Pennsylvania loses, but it does matter if the student body is spiritless, and the latter is one of the causes for anxiety. They will know that they must face the face of the question which must be answered, Is there a fighting spirit in the Pennsylvania student body as a whole?

It is fashionable in the late. Why, then, should we feel called on to give an hour quiz just before the game is on? The more I see of iron and steel mills, the better I like the iron and steel mills. But there is still another test. Faculty lectures represent the superlative in the thought of the teaching staff. The lectures are the true essence of the course. The lecturer is the man who gives the lecture, and that should be sufficient to do battle any team, even the mighty Cornell.

The big football rally will occur on Thursday, who is there who will not postpone life's little problems of an hour before tomorrow in order to be present? Is that not the fight which all the fightworthies worth the very significant gain?

CORNELL HOLDS LAST SCRIMMAGE

Ithacans have Developed Strong Defense and Offense to Cope with Aerial Formations

COACH DOBIE QUIET ON OUTCOME

Cornell held its final scrimmage yesterday at Ithaca, which consisted of putting the finishing touches on the well-dressed squad. It is expected that the aggregation will arrive early tomorrow morning and the squad will probably stay at the Philmont Country Club until the morning of the game. However, nothing has been definitely decided as to where the Ithacans will make their abode.

The Red team has ridden roughshod over St. Bonaventura, Niagara, New Hampshire, Colgate, Columbia, Dartmouth and Allegheny, but with all this, Coach Dobie radiates postnatal reports, covering his proteges. In every game thus far it has been possible for the Ithacans to win without the aid of open formations to any extent, but Coach Dobie does not depend on this department of play with assurance.

Development of the defensive tactics has been progressing along with the offensive work, and according to reports, much time has been given to the building of an effective barrier against the Red and Blue forward passing. Kaw, who showed an apparent sixth sense for reading the forward passes to the Dartmouth game, has been performing the same feat in practice scrimmages.

The Ithacans have been stressing the aerial play strongly, the "Kaw to Pfann" play being a favorite, while Ramsey, Henderson and Hanson have also been polishing up for the Thanksgiving classic, with Kaw playing the leading role with his stellar touch.
