Clairena Vail, a beautiful American girl waits in her wedding attire for her promised husband—half a world away, he basks in the smiles of Jil-Bett, the girl pearl diver.

"ALL FAIR IN LOVE OR WAR?"

LAURA JEAN LIBBEEY

This popular writer of love stories has just written, at the request of The Philadelphia Bulletin, for Bulletin readers, the most enthralling, romantic melodrama she ever penned, entitled

JIL-BETT
or Stifling Conscience

in which she attempts to unravel the above puzzling question

The first instalment of "Jil-Bett, or Stifling Conscience" appears in The Philadelphia Bulletin

Tuesday, April 3d

and will be continued in daily instalments until completed.

You will be interested in this remarkable story of the fickle love of a woman and the wandering love of a man.

Clairena Vail is the only daughter of a successful man, and while betrothed to Jay Marmaduke Smith she listens to the pleas of Edward Thorne, who proclaims his love for her and questions the sincerity of her fiance, and proposes marriage to her.

Clairena's father, Colonel Vail, does not look with favor upon Thorne and confesses to his daughter that he was "cut out" by Thorne's father after he had proposed marriage to Thorne's mother.

Immediately after Jay Marmaduke Smith's bachelor supper, Thorne, who was one of the guests, proposed a toast to the bride and administered a drug to Smith, and Smith becomes unconscious after leaving the house. Thorne follows him and places him in his automobile, driving to the outskirts of the city, intending to do away with Smith, but observing an aeroplane in its hangar, deposits the unconscious Smith in the body of the plane, where he lies undiscovered when the plane starts on a transatlantic flight. In thrilling words Laura Jean Libbey pictures the flight of the airship, its arrival over the coast of Arabia, the pursuit by sea monsters, the sandstorm in the desert and Smith's awakening at Katar, where he is found by Jil-Bett, the pearl diver, who, as his rescuer, enthralls him, while Clairena Vail and the wedding guests await the bridegroom on the wedding day.

Bulletin readers have had the opportunity of reading many absorbing novels which have been printed in its columns in serial form, but none so thrilling, none so tender, none so romantic, as this latest masterpiece of Laura Jean Libbey's entitled "Jil-Bett, or Stifling Conscience," which begins in The Philadelphia Bulletin, Tuesday, April 3d, and will be continued in daily instalments until completed.
