THE CASE FOR MINOR SPORTS

In the discussion of the ten per cent reduction in minor sports budgets in the ensuing year, The Pennsylvania has already presented the detrimental effect which will invari- ably result in the various sports. But from another angle, minor sports have always had a definite argument for more liberal appropriations of funds, which is accentuated in the further cut in their budgets. Penn the standpoint of the number of the shyster boy engaged in the various sports and professional awarding of financial support, the per capita allowance in minor sports as a whole is well below any of the major sports. And even if it Is In mind that the cost of minor sport trips is relatively equal to that for a basketball or baseball team, then the injustice of small appropriation becomes even more apparent.

At the present time 322 students are engaged in Rowing. The most conservative estimate of the total expended in the thirteen minor sports is $7,584. At the same time Crew receives an appropriation of $25,450 and Minor Sports as a whole receive $12,510. Crew by its nature cannot show any financial surplus, while its expenditures, while the budgets occurring from minor sports while not large is substantial and capable of being increased as the sports individually better place in Intercollegiate competition. It may be argued that the major sport In question attracts more attention and therefore Is deserving of more support but it Is preposterous to think that even a championship crew will be In the public eye than a large number of minor sports whose seasons over the entire sport calendar and are, therefore, truly regular. An adequate financial activity of the University a single activity whose season Is restricted to late spring. Minor sports as a group have for a number of years received a per capita appropriation for below that of most of the major sports and is not improbable that a readjustment of the financial status to provide a more liberal allowance in Minor Sports will be reflected in a steady progress in their fortunes.

Saturday was a busy day for Pennsyl-

had his men in the field working them

in order to have his proteges in condition for the meet. He has been training his cash men in a very unique manner by having them change a heated ball in order to keep them nimble. The field is practically free from all blowing material

that was left lying about after the construction of the stadium. The starter track is being dragged and is about in condition for the Carnival. The fact that there is a pair of workmen busy on it does not hamper the runners who are continuously practicing for their events.

not showing up at the appointed time will

will be carried by the track squad. Coach

A BASEBALL LEAGUE

There are thirty-five games on the schedule of the Blue and White. No other sport in the University plays through as long and vigorous a season, and yet when the schedule is completed there remains no tangible evidence to prove that the Blue and White has lived up to the claims of intercollegiate supremacy. It is strange that a game which has been so long established as a college sport should not be entitled to stronger competitive basis. It is the more surprising by reason of the adaptability of baseball to the formation of a league and the increasing interest of many of our young men in the game as it is played on. Every amateur and professional diamond throughout the country.

As Intercollegiate Baseball League would go far to establish a new interest in baseball among college men. While the game stood practically alone as a campus team there was no necessity of attempting it, but the rapid growth of Franklin and Basketball have temporarily placed the national game in the second rank of student favor. There can be little doubt that the general popularity of college baseball can be as placed in large measure by the formation of the Intercollegiate League. The knowledge that after a hard schedule some team will emerge as the champion of the East is not only as tremendous to the college but also a decided impetus to campus interest. The same results might attend the formation of a baseball league throughout the country. This would increase the possibility of scheduling of thirty games or more as an Intercollegiate Baseball League would be able to include in its membership practically all the representative teams in the East, which would be true of football, track or crew. And with the added potentialities of a league so organized linked to its erectile position is a leading college sport would seem to be a logical step for the Universities of the East.

AFTER GRADUATION

Back Spring as the college year draws to a close and Commencement time approaches, the members of the Senior Class have to consider what their relations to the University shall be after graduation. Most of the men who are graduated from Pennsylvania each June have spent four years on the campus. In that time they have come to love Pennsylvania and to wish to maintain a contact with her throughout the years to come. Unless this were so, the University would soon cease to exist. It is the more surprising by reason of the adaptability of Pennsylvania to the formation of a league and the increasing interest of many of our young men in the game as it is played on. Every amateur and professional diamond throughout the country.

BALL THURSDAY FOR ARCHITECTS

After Weeks of Extensive Preparation Architects Will Present Novel Pageant

DESIGN EXTENSIVE DECORATIONS

Architectural students have been busily engaged during the past few weeks planning the pageant which they will present in the drafting room of the Architectural building on Thursday, April 12th. It has been the custom for these annual pageants to represent some period in the history of the world. This year, the subject will be the return of Columbus to Spain after the discovery of America, and the scene will be laid in the court of the Spanish Alcazar.

Participants will depict the different races and stages of life of various countries. The majority of these groups will be composed of members of the different divisions of the Architectural School such as the Women's School of Design, the Y-Quadrangle Club, and the Industrial School of Art. Among the building and scenic numbers will be one or two formal dances which will be representative of the Period.

In conjunction with the pageant, an admirable time and effort has been expended on the decorations for the affair. As a result of these, a great deal of construction work has been necessary. Formal emphasis has been placed on the part of the students in submitting for appraisal sketches on which the making of the decorations was based.

The men in charge desire everyone to take an active part in this pageant in order to make it a success.

FOOTBALLERS BEGIN SPRING PRACTICE MONDAY AFTERNOON

Spring training for those football men who do not have to take evening classes will begin Monday afternoon, when the team will report to Coach Joslata H. Wharton. Here a light workout will be held. Remants of last season's squad are asked to report on Monday, Sunday and Monday. The Penn will give a course of physical training to put them in the best possible condition. Captain Benedick, who will give the course, has the best possible condition. Captain Benedick, who will give the course, has been present and he is very much in favor. He will exhibit all the abilities and strengths he possesses on the football field. Practice will be held daily to get the boys in shape for the competition for "Bill" Hollowbeck's cup, which will become the personal possession of the man showing the best all around skill in punting.

Opportunity is still open for those who desire to enter the football managers' competition to sign up at the Football Office, 201 Walnut Street any day this week. The competition will last until a short time after Thanksgiving, when the team will be elected and all make-up.
