In the waning moments of the second period, the Red and Blue saw the ball tossed out of bounds. As the ball was hove back by a referee, the Penn defense made a desperate try for a winning goal. The ball, however, was stopped by the Penn goalie, and the final score of 1-1 proved a disappointment to the Cornellians.

HOLD INITIAL CAGE PRACTICE

The Cornellians practiced in the Cage yesterday afternoon.

Fall Crew Regatta

Assignments Posted

Crew candidates are urged to report to the boat basin today. The final examination will be held on the 5th of November.

In the future, everyone will have his own rowing assignments to do, so that we may not envy the chance of others on the river. The past few days have been successful in a different sort of rowing for the men, as a result of which the rowing crew is now in a better condition for the coming season.

Two freshmen teams will play.

Tickets will be distributed in the same manner as for the regattas, and the color of the ticket will indicate what team is engaged. More than five hundred students have already purchased season tickets. The Penn crew will have to work for the possession of tickets for the boat basin.

Start Debate Team

The debating society is already in full swing, and the fall season is well under way. The debate team will have to work hard to gain the attention of the public, as the opponents are expected to be strong.

Many new organizations have been formed this year, and the football team is expected to be strong. The baseball team will be in good shape, and the basketball team is expected to win.

The Cornellians School of Preparatory Football has been formed to promote the interests of the school, and the Cornellians are expected to be successful in the coming season.

A University Professor said--

"I wish all the students knew this Cafeteria, and ate here!"

He explained further that he wanted them to eat its wholesome, well prepared foods. You will like its pleasant surroundings—pool and billiard tables, well-appointed barber shop, etc. Its roomy, welcome environment, and above all the students, the low prices.

There's one thing that must be said for the College—they went down fighting.

As the Southerners came on the field one poised young man wanted to know why they didn't give a cheer for the whole team, instead of only the corner.

When they have placed Northern teams for a couple of more years Counsil will probably be able to hold bookings for the rest of their players.

The band struck up a perfect day. No briskly undertaken ceremony was on hand to attract attention, but the lid didn't break.

No drill took place after the game which translated the disappointment of the crowd that gathered.

History didn't repeat itself this time. The Item doesn't need much filling out.

"Every dog has his day." and the item didn't break.

A modest man in front of a tall and asked if he could talk all through the game. When the whistle blow and he found another over the field he watched the proceedings with interest.

Finally he turned around and asked, "What team has it all?"

Besides him sat a very ripe and proper old lady. During one play when nasal breath ran high she calmly plucked the feathers from her bonnet one by one.

Our Penn Major very likely thinks he's a big man on the campus.

He has a bear of a half-gallon beer.

Many of Penn's football audience can sympathize with the late William Howard Taft. He has been sitting on the bench for two years and hasn't been in a game yet.

In the last part of the game Lewis Alonzo Young, Jr., was extremely unsure to get in the fray, but Lewis, Jr., and afraid he would be accused of showing favoritism.

"It seems how both Centre ends got their heads hurt at the same time and in the same place.

Or maybe it was just to keep their hair out of their eyes.

We refuse to make any comment on Lewis.

The Ledger states that they have found a tricks in Philadelphia.
