In yesterday's issue there appeared a somewhat lengthy communication in defense of the Wharton Association as it now exists. Two of the undergraduate members of the Wharton Association address the Press and attempt to point out where we have erred in calling attention to certain outstanding organization and supporting a method of improvement. Although an admirable play of words, the communication fails to show that the Wharton Association is justifying its existence and why even a composed body of students, whose character is such as it is necessary to carry on its work.

Admitting that the Wharton Association has not accomplished all it aims, the communication deplores the fact that we have not yet reached the ideal and the idea, that is, through which in the ideal state student organizations will develop their organization. It is true that previous attempts have shown that we do not wish to destroy the root or branch of any idea, but if the means of carrying them out are adequate, the thoughts of the Wharton Association may be, and will certainly be, abandoned unless under conditions such as exist at present. Change the conditions and give the ideals a chance.

In eloquent style the communication tells the needs for an organization and worthiness of its aims. But more truly enough nothing is said in defense of the present association, nothing is written that points to the future. Let the communication do justice to the thought and the idea, that is, through which the ideal state student organization will develop. It is true that the Wharton Association has failed in not accomplishing all it aims, but the communication deplores the fact that we have not yet reached the ideal and the idea, that is, through which in the ideal state student organizations will develop their organization. It is true that previous attempts have shown that we do not wish to destroy the root or branch of any idea, but if the means of carrying them out are adequate, the thoughts of the Wharton Association may be, and will certainly be, abandoned unless under conditions such as exist at present. Change the conditions and give the ideals a chance.

There are six reasons: First, to acquire book education; second, to participate in the cabinet of the Wharton Association, which we advance. The Wharton Association has failed in not accomplishing all it aims, but the communication deplores the fact that we have not yet reached the ideal and the idea, that is, through which in the ideal state student organizations will develop their organization. It is true that previous attempts have shown that we do not wish to destroy the root or branch of any idea, but if the means of carrying them out are adequate, the thoughts of the Wharton Association may be, and will certainly be, abandoned unless under conditions such as exist at present. Change the conditions and give the ideals a chance.

Let them continue to do so, but peel off the unnecessary outer skin. It has a key hole. It has a lock, but the office does not only lack but a Yale lock. We were halted; our ideas flew and clung to the tropic of coral. If the means of carrying them out are adequate, the thoughts of the Wharton Association may be, and will certainly be, abandoned unless under conditions such as exist at present. Change the conditions and give the ideals a chance.

APPROVED ORGANIZATIONS

In order to protect the fair name of the University from the effect of any student of uncharacteristic persons who represent themselves as reputable organizations, it has become necessary to require that each organization connected with the University receive the "approval" of the Student Organization Committee and furnish the name and address of one or more students who are responsible for the conduct of the organization.

Many of the existing organizations are hereby placed on an "approved list," but an organization desiring to be included in this list must file a petition with the Committee on Welfare stating the purpose of the organization and giving the name and address of one or more responsible students.

Information concerning the "approved list" may be obtained from the Recorder, Room 306, College Hall.

Can You Propose Without Being Accepted? That also is an accomplishment, says Joe.

Dear Editor:

You know the compelling influence of environment—a boy, a girl, moon and music. Sometimes, just the girl is all that is necessary. And what about this ever increasing popular sport of proposing—the girl might accept! Yet, some other time, when you feel in the mood, she might not accept. How to propose realistically and how to keep their acceptances and refusals in accord with your wishes—immediate and future—is, I believe, the crux of a perfect line. And, I'm sure you'll be pleased to hear that I have achieved this perfection in my line from reading VANITY FAIR.

"Europe or Bust" Song of American College Students Displays
"See America First"

TRAVELS LEAVE VIVID MEMORIES

"See America First" has been displaced by "Europe or Bust," according to the Boston Transcript. The summer travels of our college student for his wandersfoot and to come, see and conquer, name this event. The custom of finding one's education by a trip to the Old Land has been transformed. Such a jaunt has become a "travelling between close work." However, it is understood the student often becomes poverty-stricken and he is helped by his own council to be sure of his passage home. If one has been privileged to home to dormitory and fraternity house con-

SELECT DEBATERS WHO WILL OPPOSE TWO VASSAR TEAMS

Tryouts to determine the personnel of the debating team to compete with those of Vassar College were held last night in College Hall. The competition narrowed down to six of last year's team and six new men who have recently been selected. Due to the good material that is available this year, the competition has been very keen, according to Coach (ierstenlauer.

The following men were finally selected as members of the affirmative team: P. M. Malin, '24Wh.; Frank Schoble, '24C. and John Venman, ISWh.

This team will meet the Vassar negative team in Weichtman Hall, on November 24, at 4:45 P.M. Immediately after the debate there will be a dance in the gymnasium, which promises to be even more enjoyable than similar affairs held last year.

The negative team that will go to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on the same date is composed of A. T. Quipple, '14Wh., P. H. Scholtz, '24Wh., and William Kennedy, '24Wh., who will oppose the Penn affirmative team. This joint debate opens the season for the Pennsylvania debating team, which extends well into the spring.

MORE CANDIDATES NEEDED FOR DRAMATIC CLUB PRESENTATION

Trials are being held every day this week for the production of "A Successful Calamity," the fall presentation of the Dramatic Club. The play is being directed by Mr. Dolman and Mr. Baxter of the English department. Suitable candidates have not yet been found for many of the parts, and the director urges that any one interested in dramatics report at the rehearsals.

The number of the room in which the rehearsal is held is posted daily on the Dramatic Club bulletin board outside the English department offices on the second floor of College Hall. Any one may tryout for positions in the cast. Successful candidates become eligible for election to the Dramatic Club.
