PROSPECTS FOR 1924

Now that the smoke and dust of college football has blown off the 1923 season, speculation is rife as to the prospects of the 1924 season.

Coach McGraw who saw regular action during the past sea- son seems likely champion next year. Captain Donor Deary, Richmond, King Stedman, Fathomble, Warner and Stupro are all undergraduates, who, if they carry on, will make the Cornell defense a force to be reckoned with.

Of course, with the great majority of the players returning, of the eleven which concluded the Cornell game, only two were lost to the team. Four men—Bill Coleman, Ruben, Bennett, and Kuenlen on the line, with McDevitt, Thomas, Horon, Loft, Kings, Fisk and Denham in the backfield. In addition to these stalwarts, there is an array of talent coming up from the freshman teams which were thrown through the year unscathed, and crowded the season's triumphs with a like apportation over Pennsylvania. Dean Butler, McColl and Stierheim at center, tackle and guard, have displayed Cornell caliber—why taking that as a unit, it is one of the trio the prospects in the past few seasons.

Coach Kuehne also developed a galaxy of stars in the backfield, among whom Kenes, Poffe and Fremont appear most prominent to expect. Cornell strength in 1924.

BILL COLEMAN

One of the pleasing features of the Cornell game, from a Pennsylvania standpoint, was the remarkable exhibition of fine play by Bill Coleman, the halfback, and comparatively inexperienced Harvard.

All season, and until just prior to Thanksgiving, his play had been rather mediocre and did not warrant a varsity berth. But, in the two weeks preceding the turkey day show, he performed an unexpected feat, captured the attention of Line Coach Gustin, and won the distinction of starting at halfback. With two experiments, Billward and Coleman, playing alongside one another, often proning for the Harvard offense. The curiosity offense would strike the left side of the Pennsylvania line...We still have various of Coleman, playing in a running back, the better of Cornell team, as he returned the threats of Ramsey and Canover on the occasion. Not a foot did he yield, and twice in the final moments of the Cornell game, the Pennsylvania halfback roared the line of scrimmage. Pennsylvania's hat is off to the greatest exhibition of guard play for several seasons. Bill Coleman, scraper, guard extraordinary, and PENN- SYLVANIA HERO!

THAT LAST TOUCHDOWN

A staunch figure, wearing a No. 43 jersey, darted from the sidelines in the Cornell moments of the Cornell game and entered the referee. The ball was on Cornell's 24-yard line, for here the Cornell starts. A few minutes was found time for a consultation with the substitute back.

"Are you feeling fresh? Can you rush the ball?" came the referee of the moment.

"You let me carry that ball" replied Sorenson. "and I'll guarantee you four yards on each attempt!"

Sorenson immediately went through center, and the husky fullback ripped off four yards, but only after a hard struggle. Before the next play, Kaufmann came back for a consultation with Dem and Sorenson. "Send Sorenson through my position," said Kaufmann. "I've got you men ready."

We can push him for a touchdown.

Sorenson carried on the original of the one yard line—Dem, using strategy, gave the ball to Thomas to carry across for the touchdown. The latter is a splendid man. Thomas, Sorenson, and was better able to carry it seems an off-field threat. Magnetic, the Cornell defense was "all set" for another Sorenson march.

Sorenson carried the ball 21 yards in his line smashing journey, and in the offensive front this form performed against Cornell this year. Each time, Kaufmann tossed his men ahead like a mop sponge in his pail.

Sorenson carried on the oral to the one-foot line—and Dem, using strategy, gave the ball to Thomas to carry across for the touchdown. The latter is a splendid man. Thomas, Sorenson, and was better able to carry it seems an off-field threat.

OHIO STATE ON CAGE SCHEDULE

Mr. Ralph Baker, chairman of the base-ball committee at Pennsylvania, both in the person of the Joint Rules Committee, hopes that the game may help to stamp down the play of the two nations. The main point of difference in the day of the East and West is in regard to the same rule. The western college men on the Rules Committee at its last meeting in April were unanimously in favor of the new. The only objection to the new rule came from the Eastern intercollegiate League, and the difference in opinion is due, undoubtedly to the difference in the style of play in the two leagues. The international games have been scheduled by Yale and Pennsylvania very largely to study these differences in style of play, with a view to making the interpretation of the rules uniform in all conditions.

COLUMBIA STUDENTS VOTE TO ABOLISH EXAMINATIONS

The freshmen, junior and senior classes of Columbia University have voted to support the general plan put forward by the Student Senate, the intercollegiate governing organization, providing for the elimination of final class examinations in the cases of students who have maintained high rank. The freshmen voted 1400 to 3 in support of a plan which will be submitted to the faculty for final disposition.

Dean Hawkes of the university declared yesterday that he stood ready to discuss the proposed changes with any authorized representative group of the students, and such a conference will doubtless follow the vote of the respective classes. Just when this conference will take place remains undecided.
