HOU STON CLUB MANAGEMENT UNDERTAKES RADICAL CHANGE

Radical changes have been made in the management of the Houston Club on January 31. The old regime gave way to the new management, headed by Miss Thomas Hart, 74C. Paul R. Hornung, 74A, was named to the post of assistant director. The Student Employment Bureau of the new management will be in charge of the afternoon car of the club. Miss Hornung was assistant director under the old régime.

The new director has utilized a decided police force in cooperation with the services of the organization "Deputys and champions" since Hart will be the "wardens of all our employees. The new director is expected to devote every possible effort to the satisfaction of the members, to protect and serve the public in a better and more serious manner of convenience to the student body.

Spotlight on Footlights

Continued from Page Four parts. But the cost is large and the theme has never obtained the recognition it deserves.

"The Dance" is admirably well done. It is continuous but far more entertaining than anything on the Minstrely. R. L. M.

Chestnut-Zeno

"Zeno" is playing at Chestnut Street Theater. Home for the last week if an extended engagement. The show is in a cold room from "The Kettleship Chair" which was a popular presentation of stock companies about seven years ago. It has, however, the touch of modernity in its use of springing atmosphere, twinkling half-heads, and radio receivers. Pieces disappear, tables crest, panels move, hands and arms flow about in a way that is real reappear. Men are found dead, locked in steel boxes and not in handkerchiefs. The hero is suspected, the host is suspected, the heroine is suspected, the villain is not suspected. You will be thrilled by the spirit forms vanished by the mechanical ingenuity, blinded by the flashlight power, and startled by the unexpected shot. Unless you are extremely unmusical you will enjoy the evening by trying to guess which one of the characters is "Zeno," the mastermind. What more is necessary for a "thriller"?

We recommend "Zeno" as a mystery play and encourage the proper number of thieves. Three may, however, be introduced. Thee may be three of the darkest stage and the music to your partner for free or at $12.00 temporary employment. H. W. P.

Keith’s Vaudeville

This week finds a good show at Keith’s, a show that should not be discarded with faint praise. The show is one who has no music in himself for treason, stratagems and smiles," said Shakespeare and so quote the program. Allan Rogers and Lonesome Allen make even the slight individuals each satisfactory with their entertainment. Their walk together is for above the average and are capable of rendering some novel that really is terrific. None Helpless received the plaudits of the crowd. Her return to vaudeville after an absence of nearly four years is greeted as only an old favorite can be welcomed back to a first love. With characteristic grace she brings her little girl act, the Parrott crevices and the by marriage scene back with her, and they comprise an offering that is superb. For grace in dancing Helene Coyne and Henri French have an offering that clearly deserves the other acts for head blue boxes. Miss Coyne is the owner of legs that rival Mistinguett and she controls them with all the art of a top dancer. This is well supported by French in his song and dance act. For side splitting laughs Shaw and Lee, wellknown diaboloists of place, can be given credit for the heartiest chuckles that have from the audience. There far be held in volume in Bevan and Pilts is one to to indigent favorites by the din of applause. Both these comedy and song acts are worth the admission price to the show.

The animal and acrobatic acts introduce a novelty of extremes. Turnout and situation and Plce DAX are the only remnants of train of game monsters in the world. The Kithrane dogs perform many remarkable tricks of human imitation. The usual moving pictures and the joke.

Last year Pennsylvania lost an exceptionally successful baseball team. That the Princeton and Holy Cross games brought victories instead of defeats, the baseball season has been opened.
Thus, all through the first game is yet many weeks off, the baseball season will we have?

Let’s put the first line itself and, for the time being, ignore the schedules.
In the line, the backstop position is filled—Lobdell Goldblatt, 1924 captain, in one of the best catchers in collegiate ranks. He has a fine arm, can use his head, and has the confidence of the veterans on the squad. Next comes first base—John K. Norris, third-string baseman, who filled him just about a week to nail down the job. All will have a fight on his hands at second base, bat in the neighborhood of the starting berth unless somebody passes him, probable will be a third base open, and there will be a very rude battle for the only job left in the infield. The outfield will be crowded with Williams, Dehn, Plas and Holt way among these present, mention only the veterans.

If he could disregard the pitching staff, there would be little to give Coach Coffey any worry. With the expectations of their base, practically all of the positions are taken down already; unless someone breaks a leg. The Teach concentrate on scientific base work and the stuff of the Farrell-Allen-Steffle (fielding combination drilled.
The infield, as we have seen, will unless we are conscriptions delayed the courses.

If wealth and quality of material are considered, Pennsylvania should without a peer in the East. It is highly possible that this year’s team will solve the problem of the pitching staff more quickly than has been done in the past.

This year’s team, like every year, may be a little shorter than last year’s team. Last year’s centerfielder, who was equal to almost anything in the pitching line—a very base steal their records. The Teach this year’s team, possibly played better or unluckily for the three-year-old perhaps unfairly, because the other pitcher Roch, William and Tommy second-stringers in 1924, are still at their best.
In 1924 it is the problem that neither Pennsylvania would have a number in the pitching line. If Coach Coffey sends a pitching staff equal its ability, the Red and Blue men won’t be stopped anything. It’s up to the infielders.
