COMMON FRESHMAN YEAR SOLVES GREAT PROBLEM

Recent Scholar's Improvement Results of Methods Practised by Yale in Experiment

MORE CONCENTRATION REQUIRED

Yale University, according to President Angell, is solving the problem of how to give to freshmen the better start in their education which Yale has in recent years made to the improvement of collegiate methods.

For years the Freshman has been in many ways the most difficult problem facing the colleges. To set aside, for the supervision of this group a body of specially selected men chosen for their outstanding abilities as teachers marks an important step in American education. The fact that the scholarship of the experimental classes has risen through the organization has shown a distinct and continuous improvement, with a corresponding improvement in the teaching brought about by students.

The English department, under the leadership of Mr. Finnegane, is presenting to the colleges. In the training of the freshmen, the emphasis has been on the development of their individual talents and abilities. The Freshman has been in many ways the most difficult problem facing the colleges. Since 1837—Quality

Since its opening, Harvard College has been the focus of much social and competitive sport, and as a means of recruiting, the men's tennis team has been a popular and successful part of the campus. The team is not only a source of pride for the college community but also a means of developing future leaders and role models for younger students. Harvard is one of the most successful college tennis teams in the country, with numerous national championships and individual titles to their name.

Tennis is a popular sport in the United States, and its popularity continues to grow. In recent years, there has been a surge in interest in tennis, both at the college level and in the general public. This interest is partly due to the success of professional tennis players, who have brought the sport to a new level of sophistication and excitement. The rise of social tennis has also contributed to the sport's popularity, as it provides a fun and active way to stay healthy and connected with others.

In conclusion, Harvard's tennis team is a testament to the sport's enduring appeal and the college tennis community's commitment to excellence. The team's success is a source of pride for the college and its students, and it continues to inspire young people to take up the game and pursue their dreams on the court.
