Drawings On Exhibit

Sketches by Architectural Graduate May Be Viewed in Fine Arts Building

Pencil drawings and watercolor sketches by Mr. James Chalmn, Jr., graduate student in architecture this year, may be seen in the Fine Arts Building this week and next. Mr. Chalmn, who is 23 years old, has been an architectural student in the university for three years and is a native of Indianapolis. The exhibits are in the first-floor east room of the Fine Arts Building and will be open to the public during regular museum hours and will close on April 15.

Aside from their importance as a test of the student's skill and appreciation of his medium, these sketches are an expression of the character and outlook of the individual. The student is not afraid to criticize himself, for he is convinced that his work is inferior to that of the great masters. Mr. Chalmn's work is characterized by a sense of proportion and a feeling for the beauty of line and form. He is not afraid to be bold and express his ideas in terms of his own personal language.

The drawings are a revelation of the artist's personality. They show a great deal of originality and imagination, and are a tribute to the student's talent and ability. They are a source of inspiration and encourage the student to continue his work. The exhibit is a valuable contribution to the university's art program and is sure to be a success.

Professors Suggest Two Survey Courses for First-Year Men

The American Association of University Professors recommends that institutions offer "Thinking" and "Nature of the World and Man" as survey courses for first-year men.

"Thinking" is intended to help students develop critical thinking skills, while "Nature of the World and Man" aims to introduce students to the fundamental concepts of philosophy.

Hart Appeals to Students

Hart appeals to students to consider the value of these courses beyond their potential academic benefits. He encourages students to view these courses as an opportunity to engage with new ideas and perspectives.

Series of Fine Arts Tours Are Planned

Travel Courses Will be Given on European Tour This Summer

Plans for a series of travel-courses in the fine and applied arts during the summer of 1921 have been announced by the Museum of International Education, 255 Fifth Avenue, New York City. The purpose announced by the institute is to enable students to make a study of art, architecture and design in European countries by employing painting, sculpture, architecture, interior decoration and landscape design will be provided.

Miss Edith R. Abbot, senior instructor of art history in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, will give a series of lectures on shipboard on history and appreciation of painting and sculpture. John C. Sheldon, of Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, will also instruct in painting and general lectures. Gallery tours will be made at Rome, Florence, Milan, Venice, Paris, Brussels, Ghent, Antwerp, Amsterdam, Hanover, the Hague and London. Optional tours in painting and sketching will be held at intervals.

A study of important buildings and decorative commissions, the examination of drawings and models made by designers, and the sketching and photographing of details of architecture and ornament will be charged of Pro. A. C. Phillips of the College of Architecture, Cornell University. Lectures and field work in landscape and garden architecture will be the hands of Prof. M. A. L. French, Fellow in landscape architecture at the American Academy in Rome, and new assistant professor of landscape architecture at Cornell University. The historical and technical side will be taken up by the marking and Phene- vian villas, those at Tivoli and Frascati, examples of Later and primitive in and near London and Paris.

The problem of unification is a continuation of the interest of courses begun in previous years. Latest painting and other matters may be secured from the Institute or from interested Times building, New York City.

Rifle Team In Tie For League Honors

Gunners Scheduled to Meet Harvard and Norwich in Matches This Week

Pennsylvania and Norwich are still tied for first place in the Intercollegiate League with four victories and no defeats, each team having won its matches in the second half of last week. The Red and Blue had an all support-ers' meet this weekend, ending with Columbia, 1941-1942. Captain Williams and his men shot over 100 for the first 100 yard.

Norwich won last Dartmouth, 1919-1920, beating the Green by a wide mar- gin. In the other league contests, Brown beat Princeton, M. I. T. defeated Harvard, and Penn State was victorious over Yale. Pennsylvania meets Harvard in the first half of this week's matches and Norwich in the second period.

Judging by comparative scores, the local gunners will have little difficulty with the Red and White, leaving the con- test with the Vermont university to determine the probable winner of the championship. The Norwich men are the dark horses of the race. Little is known about them previous to the open- ing of the league season. In the first two matches both are likely to be held.
