SOUTH AMERICA

In planning a journey to South America, no consideration is more important than the vessel that is to be your home for the voyage of several weeks. The luxuries that you have pictured as part of the palatial private yacht are realized in the appointments of the famous "Santa" steamers. The cabins (all outside) are cozy and homelike. Each meal is a daily feast. Every feature you build the voyage itself as pleasant as the days that await you in the South American wonderlands.

Your family should sail with PERUG and CRUISE through the Panama Canal, South America and to visit ancient Inca ruins. Personally conducted or independent tours that await you in the South American wonderlands.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(Special) —

Dr. Nathan Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, has issued a statement concerning the nationwide organization of Columbia-British students under the College Bureau of the Republican National Committee. Mr. Butler, native character and peddler, is an earnest advocate of early political training. He terms the movement to interest and interest political students in matters of current American politics, he says.

"A lot of us are greatly concerned at the widespread lack of interest in political principles and politics. In the growing indifference to assume any share of political responsibility. No political institutions will work themselves. The best form of government requires men and women to design it."

The Columbia-British students will be uppermost in your mind.

"Many of our young people have grown up and are going up under conditions which convince them that the meaning of political independence is that we are Everywhere eligible to eligibility."

Some Personal Mail to Jay E. House

Being a few random transcripts from the letters that come by hundreds to the writer of "On Second Thought." It is only fair to say that the "boosts" outnumber the "knocks" ten to one.

Some Say This—

"I know of course, that you are an adept at writing yourself down an ass, but I never knew what a scoundrel you were until I read your article on the Shakespearean drama."

"You come along and you ridicule our pet gods and make sport of our institutions. Then we are sore."

"To the Editor: Don't you think it is about time to pull off your Mr. Jay E. House? His column is getting on such a low plane that it does not fit in with the high character of your paper."

"The most useless thing I have learned in life was to read your column. I don't know just why your boss tolerates having you around to annoy the natives or why he apparently feels satisfied to part with good money for your efforts."

"You may add my compliments to those of H—— paid to the mediocrity and crass ignorance of one who leads his stupid comment with the ramshackle title 'On Second Thought.'"

"To my mind you write the best column in the good U. S. A. Sounds like hyperbole but it's my opinion and that of many of my friends."

"It would be difficult adequately to communicate to you the degree of pleasure with which I read your column this morning. It is a most delightful essay on the subject it treats. Like everything else from your pen which I have read, it is written with beautiful simplicity and directness."

"You have given me many an hour of pleasure. Make me think, too. I have never known you to flirt, fumble or fool with the English language."

"I am only a humble hack driver of East Boston—we still have horses in our town—but I have a sense of the greatness of things, and I call you Old House, the best maker of pithy paragraphs in this country of ours."

"I love the column—its wit and humor and spice and everything about it."

"I must say your witticisms and criticism in the column afford me much amusement. I always read the columns—feel sorry for those who are born without a sense of humor. The versatility of your mind is amazing and delights me immensely."

"I take pride in my native town that it has attracted to its service so able a thinker—as told a speaker."

"Often have I marveled at the refreshing cleanness of the column."

Form your own opinion. Certainly a column which brings such diverse comment daily is well worth reading. The chances are that if you have a well-developed sense of humor and can "stand the gaff" you will get more fun and enjoyment out of it than anything you read. Suppose you start tomorrow morning to find out whether it tickles you or makes you mad. In either case you won't be able to stop reading—
