The Presidents Message

Address of Dr. Jacob H. Pestisaman at the opening of the 100th year of the University of Pennsylvania, Friday morning, September 20, 1924.

We meet at the opening of another university year, as every year in the past has been, with opportunities, with duties, with dangers, and with hopes. While it is true that in general one age is much like another, it is also true that the opportunities, duties, dangers, and hopes of a university year are those of a group of students, the president of which changes annually about 20 per cent. It is therefore true that the opportunities, duties, dangers, and hopes of the students vary with the particular year of their course that is opening. To the freshman all is new, including himself. To the senior three years of university life have given knowledge and experience, which, if he has been faithful, cause him to falter and see his opportunities, perform to the best of his ability his duties, avoid or meet successfully dangers, and so make in hopes greatly enlarged by his view of the possibilities of life from a greater intellectual and spiritual insight and an increased seriousness of purpose. The University is a year older and we are a year older than when we gathered in similar assembly in September 1921. New buildings about you are evidences of material development of the University, representing simply necessarily means to the great spiritual purposes for which universities exist. A new dormitory for women is provided in the acquisition and remodeling of the University of an apartment house at the northeast corner of Thirty-sixth and Chestnut streets. It will bear the name of Benjamin Hall. This will be the late Rev. Joseph M. Brinley's further contribution to the erection of Benjamin Hall at the northeast corner of Thirty-sixth, and Sansom streets. This, too, is primarily for the use of university women and will be the graduate School and the School of Nursing. The steam plant on the banks of the Schuylkill River south of Forty-and-three street will be taken over by the University and will be turned into a beautiful lighted place, the equipment of which is at the present time in the process of being equipped with a fine field house, containing showers, baths and lockers for thousands students. One end of the building is for men and the other for women. To the University Museum a large wing has been added, chiefly to the north, in accordance with the proven plans to frame a part of the Egyptian collections and objects from the latest excavations in Syria, Mesopotamia, and Persia, whose notable work has been accomplished by the Henry C. Lea Library.

The Henry C. Lea Library

To the Library has been added the priceless collection of books and manuscripts to the library the Henry C. Lea whose writings place him among the greatest of American scholars in his field. This notable addition to the resources of our University Library will be permanently located in a separate addition in the building providing thus the intelligent of Mr. Lea's son. Mrs. Lea and Mr. Arthur H. Lea. The buildings and furnishings of the room in which Henry C. Lea kept his books and his desk have been removed from the University Library. By special action of the Trustees of the University, the Lea books and manuscripts may be sold only in the Library. I wish to put on record an account of great tribute and respect to the late Mr. Lea and to his children for their notable gift to the cause of scholarship.

The William T. Carter Professorship

Twenty-five years ago, Mrs. William T. Carter established on the books of the Lehigh River near Bethlehem the William T. Carter Junior Republic as a memorial to her distant Ideal husband. In the intervening years, several hundred boys and girls who were given their training while officers of the Republic have grown up into useful merchants and manufacturers. Various schemes have been developed for the training of merchant men and women. The William T. Carter Junior Republic will be a memorial to the late Mr. Carter devoted to this school for cultivating the most important features of the work for establishing and maintaining in the University of Pennsylvania the William T. Carter Professorship of Field Work. The William T. WHEARTON FRESHMEN TO INSPECT LIBRARY

Students of Political Science I in the Wheaton School will go in groups, meeting Tuesday, and Wednesday to have their formal introduction to the College Library. Their course will include five new reading rooms, the periodical room, and its Wheaton School Reading Room. It is the desire of Ana Deacon, Director of Library Service, to help the freshmen "know their library," and to always make the Library pleasant. As a further manifestation of this spirit a Library Committee has been appointed for the purpose of being distributed free. Its forty small pages contain articles from the library and other interesting news. Mr. Ellsworth has also secured several lists of books suitable to the Wheaton school. These lists may be consulted at the Library for three cents a copy. To consult them the Department of Library Service, Room 19, 2nd floor, and Room 41, 3rd floor, will be open during regular office hours Monday through Thursday.

FOOTBALL AGAIN!

That great college game, football, is with us once more. The dull feel of the autumn grass, the roping of every muscle, the zest of new chums, the resounding cheering, the enthusiasm and spirit which it calls forth will again be a reality when the Varsity teams of the rival universities meet on the field.

We are successful, or unsuccessful, the night of a Pennsylvania victory is the most inspiring spectacle that any University man, young or old can see. Football brings all the latest spirit, enthusiasm and loyalty to the forefront. The victory of one team, the defeat of the other, the full season of the year is the finest and most inspiring season of the year.

We, who have been here for three years appreciate this and are looking forward to the opening of the fall in anticipation and a whetted appetite for all that is to come. Several thousand first year men will see their first big game or the majority. Because of the newness and greatness of the situation it will indeed be a sensation for them.

" loot!" Young is building a team which will get its first test today. Its success is uncertain. Only time will tell. Winning or losing it will be a good team. We say this from experience. Pennsylvania has never put a team on the field that wasn't the pride of the institution.

Football is an important feature in the training and preparation for things that are to come. With our competent coach and the speed he has had the team to build and the support that both will undeniably have great achievements may be forthcoming.

A GREAT STEP FORWARD

With this issue The Pennsylvania presents to the campus and the world at large a real, a potable supplement, a feature which will appear once a week throughout the college year in doing something about the important features which any University man, young or old can see. Football brings all the latest spirit, enthusiasm and loyalty to the forefront. The victory of one team, the defeat of the other, the full season of the year is the finest and most inspiring season of the year.

With all of the local publications making bold assertions for themselves as claims for the future of the United States, we feel that the results will be a significant one for the future. The Sunday Times, the nation's leading paper, has said that the results will be a significant one for the future. The Saturday Evening Post, the nation's leading magazine, has said that the results will be a significant one for the future.

We have heard that quite a few of them spent the night sleeping in an upright position and that a number of the sophomores were heard that quite a few of them spent the night sleeping in an upright position and that a number of the sophomores were heard that quite a few of them spent the night sleeping in an upright position.

The dormitories are no longer the scene of activity for the entire college year in doing something about the important features which any University man, young or old can see. Football brings all the latest spirit, enthusiasm and loyalty to the forefront. The victory of one team, the defeat of the other, the full season of the year is the finest and most inspiring season of the year.

KITE AND KEY AIDS IN ACCLIMATING FRESHMEN

Publicity Work to Be Reviewed

Kite and Key Society for Dispensing Information to Freshmen New Established by Society Members

PUBLICITY WORK TO BE REVIEWED

Beginning first full year of the organization, the Kite and Key Society already has accomplished much of its task of acquainting the incoming freshmen with their surroundings.

A member of the society has been stationed at the Thirty-seventh Street entrance to the University to dispense information and assistance to the first-year men. Regulation maps and keys were sold there under the supervision of the society.

For the present, the Kite and Key aids its attention on its branch of activity. With the beginning of school next week, however, the members will resume their varied duties which include the making and distribution of visiting cards and handling Pennsylvania publicity work in preparatory schools.

The first point of contact with the freshmen was made at the Christian Association camp at Green Lane. Several members of the Society were present to aid the Association's representatives in giving the fresund who first taste of Pennsylvania traditions and customs.

David P. Willis, '25 W., President of the Kite and Key Society, gave an informal talk. He touched briefly on the development of the Society, its duties at the present time, and its plans for the future.

Fine Arts School Offers New Courses

50 Percent Increase in Enrollment Marks Opening of Undergraduate Department

With the registration showing an increase of 50 percent in enrollment over last year, and with several new courses being inaugurated, the School of Fine Arts starts the new term with several problems.

A series of illustrated lectures on Modern Art are to be planned for the coming year. By Thomas Hope of Boston Foundation, M.R.A., has undertaken to lecture here on Tuesdays at three o'clock. The subjects of the School of Fine Arts, the Teachers College, and the School of Education. These will have taken courses in Medieval History and Fine Arts.

The lectures are given for the benefit of the students. A few from the teaching tribe to Harvard, who are interested in the fine arts, will probably be able to take the course.

A new five-year course in Landscape Architecture leading to the degree of Bachelor of Landscape Architecture, open to both men and women, has recently been inaugurated. Prof. Robert Woolley, right, M. L. has been called to take the new chair. Since his graduation from Harvard two years ago, Prof. Woolley has practiced his art successfully in be Philadelphia and New York.

In addition to the regular four-year course in Architecture, a new five-year course has been inaugurated. Although the two courses are somewhat different, both lead to the same degree of Bachelor of Architecture, and the one to the student is the same.

Record Enrollment

In Summer School

Figures Show Increase in States and Institutions Represented

In enrollment, geographical distribution and the number of other educational institutions represented, the Summer School of the University continues to exceed the figures of last year. The twentieth annual session, which was conducted this summer, shows an enrollment of 2,800, and increase of 27 over last year's figures. The number of states and territories represented is 41, and increase of three over last year, while the number of foreign countries continuing students has increased from 60 to 65 in three.

Last year figures of 2,727 were reached for the reason of approximately 500 fewer at the Franklin Field. This year, however, so many of the Federal Board students have completed their work, that the group supplied less than 100 students. Of even more importance, however, was the increase in the number of educational visits from this year. The number of educational visits to the university this year is 565, an increase of 125 from last year. This increase is due to the increase in the number of educational visits received, the number of educational visits returned by the original institutions represented was greatly increased.
