Mr. Mulhall on Saturday's Mistakes Before Practice at River Field

"Ted" Fairchild Injures Leg

Selins遭到 the accumulated pressures that occupied Philadelphia and its environs yesterday, the football team, with few exceptions, finished a heavy workout at River Field. The rain had turned the field into a wet, slippery mess and made long rain practically an impossibility in the afternoon, which was held.

Coach Lou Young, before the team took to the field, gave them a long lecture regarding the mistakes they had made in Saturday's contest and stressed points that he wished corrected. After the talk the varsity squad went to River Field and a short scrimmage was held, mainly to give the team an opportunity to handle a slippery pitch.

Up to date the team has had little opportunity to try this style of play but potential players have had more than a modest chance to handle the wet ball and consider that this was practically the first chance to play under adverse conditions, they performed creditably.

The team joined a fine one when Ted Fairchild was declared eligible but in Saturday's game he hurt his leg and will not be able to take the field tomorrow against Franklin and Marshall. Several other of the first string players who played the greater part of the opening contest did not appear at practice but have been given a day off to rest.

Young

The schedule for the varsity boys after home came to a scrimmage against the seniors, and with this workout the eleven should be fit on edge for the Drexel contest tomorrow afternoon. The scrimmage will take place on Franklin Field provided the ground dries up enough.

Coach O'Brien's Bravo eleven will face the opposition to the varsity tomorrow afternoon and this game should serve to show just how much the team improved on Franklin Field and not be torn up too much.

A C. GROUPS DISCUSS SCIENCE AND RELIGION

With the beginning of another year, the Christian Association has planned a program for the moral and religious discussion groups. The chairman of the committee in charge is William L. Little, '25 C., and the work is carried on under the direction of the Department of Religious Education of which the Rev. J. C. Lingen was head.

The leaders of the groups met on Tuesday, October 1, while many of the fraternities are prepared to see the outline which was prepared by Professor Arthur Holmes of the Psychology Department and deals with the relationship between Science and Religion.

Time is given to the discussion of the most prevalent ideas in the minds of the students.

This course was selected because the students of last year voted it the most desirable of all the courses proposed.

Many of the fraternities are prepared to start on Tuesday, October 7, while most of the dormitories and housing house and classroom groups will start at an early date.

Different Than Anything On The Campus

"From Freshman Cap to Cap and Gown"
Many of our readers may have noticed the announcement in yesterday's issue of the fact that the registration in the University for the school year 1935-36 has exceeded the Exas mark. In fact, those famous have been given wide publicity in the Philadelphia newspapers.

This is indeed a notable showing, and we cannot but point out that Pennsylvania is doing its share in the educational world, and the place that it most necessarily have in the educational scheme of our country when it takes upon itself to lead the way in providing an opportunity for intelligent and advancement to so many the University is fulfilling in the highest degree the aims and principles for which it was founded.

And yet another view of figures such as these are sometimes misleading to the general public. The relation between 15,000 persons enrolled in the University and the fact that we do not have 10,000 freshmen boys in every phase of athletics is very perplexing. "Why is it," they say, not only to themselves, but to the world at large that an institution with such a large student body does not come out with a superior college over colleges in an equal amount of but a few thousand students, that the difference in numbers would seem to make probable? Why cannot Penn's fall out as well as the other new schools begin to turn out splendid teams beyond every year than schools with but a few thousand to draw from?"

This seems to be a very logical question, and were the president of the team, as stated above, there could be only one answer. With 15,000 men to draw on, our athletic teams would soon be on a much higher level.

The following figures are correct, so far as the number of men take undergraduate classes, the men who are eligible to participate in student activities, in which others are included, is far less than is generally supposed.

The figure when added up the number of students who could participate in any undergraduate activity by reason of sex, of character, or circumstances of enrollment is less than 3,000.

The reason this figure does not appear a little fortuitous and proof of that statement may be necessary. The total of all female students, professional students, graduate students and those not enrolled with the University through the extension schools is approximately 5,000. Virtually all of them are prohibited by virtue of the conditions in three various groups from any campus activity. The medical and law school students, because of an earlier earned degree and previous work, have no choice whatsoever of participation. From the dental school some activities are active, but the proportion is such that the number of undergraduate departments. The various sororities and fraternities, so far as the number of students are concerned and, naturally, the thousand or so of women students is so few.

And so we see that the field of undergraduate activity and athletics is limited almost exclusively to the regular undergraduate younger, who number about 3,000.

We have no apology to make for our activities, particularly athletics, which bear the brunt of most of this criticism. Very much the opposite. But would we like to clarify this one point in regard to the figures are published. It is not very apparent on the surface and the important conclusions are most extraneous. If more were known and the facts more clearly understood, a great deal of misinformed and unmerited criticism would be avoided.

In the three years we have been on the Campus there is one thing that all of the Fleece courses in the University cannot satisfactorily account for and that is how a small body, and that is how a small group of one can be operated in a few years.

For instance, the tuition bills are standing between the counter with larger figures than ever and even seem to be considering operating a loan on the counter in an attempt to make ends meet. A prominent Campus restaurant reports that lime has gone so far that bankruptcy is in the distance. We are not here to say that there is anything to this, but it is in the distance. We are not here to say that there is anything to this, but it is not far to the general public; it is not far to say that prevailing prices have been rising at an alarming rate. It is particularly noticeable that there isn't a simple place here abouts with as much as ten dollars in the till when we have to check to be emptied. It is not far to the general public that it is not only here of Pennsylvania that keeps them here on the Campus saving cents.

-This is the P. E. T. B. A's, or a group of all the coaches in the school of the year is, "The Pennsylvanian," the official organ of the campus, and the place that it must necessarily have in the educational world, and the place that it must necessarily have in the educational scheme of our country when it takes upon itself to lead the way in providing an opportunity for intelligent and advancement to so many the University is fulfilling in the highest degree the aims and principles for which it was founded.

We are going as far as if there isn't some great sacrifice we can make for the university boys this year to that we can graduate with an independent fortune.

It would seem as though the P. E. T. B. A. were going to put out a weekly newspaper and of their own. They are going to say that if we believe that precipitation was affected by several of the men we have overheard and the student newsmakers, in the weekly newspaper of our own, we are going to do it to whatever extent it would be necessary. This total of the student newspaper that we have in the press.

The reason is that the Glee boys are going to put out a weekly newspaper and of their own, and we are going to say that if we believe that precipitation was affected by several of the men we have overheard and the student newsmakers, in the weekly newspaper of our own, we are going to do it to whatever extent it would be necessary.
