ZANE GREY, AS STUDENT OF UNIVERSITY, STARRED ON 1886 BASEBALL TEAM

W. C. Teune and Franklyn Brother of "Dane" Coogan, both of the New York University baseball team, are well known to Major League base ball fans. They are equally familiar to the students of the New York University. They are both first-string players and are considered by the students to be two of the best players on the team.

Wallowed Sophs with Potatoes
Publisher's Announcement: "All the Soppies of the Purple Sage" brought rapid fame as novelist.

People who know Zane Grey during his youth expected any day to hear of his death from one of his wild escapades. Indeed, it is declared that he should finally give up his writing and become as "hard boiled" as Grey feared he would become. Instead, he retired, and in a short time a crack baseball player at Pennsylvania before he was graduated as a doctor of medicine. He now in a world-known author, whose specialty is thrilling western stories presented in such a manor that whatever reads them, whether it be the day reader or the critic cannot but become an enthusiastic admirer of the versatile author.

Zane Grey's "The Fabulous Five" was one of the most remarkable men of a few months after he had graduated from Kansas State College. He was a student at the University of Pennsylvania when he had graduated. He was a member of the university's baseball team and had been the "pitcher marvel" of the team. After Grey had graduated, he went to New York City and became a lawyer.

At the very start of his University life there were great friction between Grey and the Sophomores. His first blunder was to hit a curve ball which the Sophomores completely stopped both as to pitching and batting comprising University life.

The second great event in his college career was when he was shifted to left field when he had graduated. His abilities as a left fielder were so great that the Sophomores could not stop him. He started hitting the ball into a field which he had never played in before. He hit two home runs in one game, and it is said that in this game he had only one hit to the left fielder.

The third great event in his college career was when he was shifted to center field. He started hitting the ball into a field which he had never played in before. He hit two home runs in one game, and it is said that in this game he had only one hit to the left fielder.

The fourth great event in his college career was when he was shifted to center field. He started hitting the ball into a field which he had never played in before. He hit two home runs in one game, and it is said that in this game he had only one hit to the left fielder.

The fifth great event in his college career was when he was shifted to center field. He started hitting the ball into a field which he had never played in before. He hit two home runs in one game, and it is said that in this game he had only one hit to the left fielder.

The sixth great event in his college career was when he was shifted to center field. He started hitting the ball into a field which he had never played in before. He hit two home runs in one game, and it is said that in this game he had only one hit to the left fielder.

Open Sale of Tickets for "Poor Richard"

Students Will Have Benefit of Special Ticket Prices in Performance of Franklin Play

MAGNY ARBUCKLE TO APPEAR

Half-price tickets for Louis Steve Shipman's new play, "Poor Richard," are available at the Register's Office, 200 College Hall, and at the various branch offices. The play is presented in the Alice Street Theatre.

This is the first production of "Poor Richard," and being presented by two alumni members, Charles K. Gordon and Craig Bigelow, Jr. The play is of particular interest to students and alumni of the University and in Pennsylvania because of Franklin's direct relation to its early history and the founding of the University of Pennsylvania. The special ticket prices are due for the performances on November 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, and 25.

In this production Mr. Louis Steve Shipman, the playwright, appears as one of a great American group. It is possible that Mr. Shipman may be seen as speak before the Arts Association some time during the engagement. He soon played a high role in American letters and has editorial prestige in journalistic effort, a great deal of high quality, and has been an authoritative historical background.

Mr. Martin Atkinoff, pays the part of Benjamin Franklin, has made a faithful character study of this roll, and his ability to be accurate to the story and proper manner is very effective. In playing this role, Mr. Atkinoff, whose resemblance to Franklin is tremendous, realizes the ambition of his life, as he dreams of being able to bring the philosopher on the stage. In "Poor Richard," Franklin, for the first time, becomes a stage character.

The scenes of the play are laid in Paris, and Versailles and the story is a charming one, revealing Franklin as a human being with his own memories, as well as a statesman and philosopher. It is based on the experiences of Franklin during his sojourn in France as the Ambassador from the United States. The play is opening in Philadelphia, where it will remain for four weeks before going to New York.

Chief in support of Mr. Atkinoff are Blanche York, Helen Beadle, Oliver-Oliver, Oswald York, John Davidson and a number of others. The costumes and scenery are by Norman B-Hoffman. John Cooke directed the production.

ARMISTICE DAY

On the sixtieth anniversary of the signing of the armistice at 11 o'clock on November 11, 1918, the University paused to recall in memory of these who gave their lives in the service of the nation now, anew to wear the ornamental insignia of victory and the bunting which was displayed on each of the buildings of the University. The symbolic gesture, a mark of quality known the Nation over. The American Legion, France, has Italy.
