MR. OSGOOD, PRESIDENT
OF A.I.E.E. GIVES TALK
"Keep Your Mind and Body Alert Always." Says Mr. Osgood in his round: "Always Have Hope" WHOLE CONVENTION SUCCESSFUL.

Speaking before an audience of about 850 persons, Mr. Osgood, president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, gave an instructive address before the professors and students of colleges attending the convention of the students' branch of the A. I. E. E. convention. The meeting was under the auspices of the Philadelphia section of the institute.

Mr. Osgood's speech was helpful not only to the engineers, but also to all the other students present. He noted that there are three qualities necessary for success—perseverance, hard work, and ability. "The world doesn't owe you a living," said Mr. Osgood, "but you owe it to your work. You must keep your mind and body in trim. You get out of the world what you put in." He suggested having a hobby as a good way to keep the mind alert and active. "Think straight and keep your back straight and you will get along right," he said.

Mr. Osgood also said that, "The world doesn't owe you a living," and that the young engineer must have among his fellow-men (this he continued) the ability. Mr. Osgood's speech was helpful not only to the engineers, but also to all the other students present. The Wharton School of Tomorrow

In all the preliminary announcements concerning the University of Pennsylvania Field, nothing was received with greater enthusiasm and approval by the student body than the statement conveying the new Wharton School building. No single departure has ever experienced the phenomenon of growth encountered at the Wharton School. And no single department has ever received such wide or such personal applause as the economics department. Each student is eager to learn that the course in finance and commerce are taught in a single building, especially since the college population was expressly for instruction in such subjects as these.

In the words of the chairman of the Field, "A new building to which the economics department has become a necessity, not only because of the urgent need for classroom space and for rooms in which to live the students, but for the instruction of the informal student. The instruction of the school is based on the belief that to live in the presence of business is to live in a house, but to live in the presence of commerce is to live in a home.

The programs of studies of the best and the most effective is the structure which the Wharton School expects to live in by the end of the fiscal year. The University has not yet decided how many of the students will be made available for this initial program.

The students have found the following in their mail this morning:

To Express - F. W. C.

Among the annual statements of accounts, we found the following in your mail this morning:

1. We are glad to hear that the new Wharton building is being constructed on the campus.

2. We are informed that the students are working hard on the new Wharton building.

3. We are told that the students are planning to hold a meeting in the new Wharton building.

4. We are informed that the students are planning to hold a meeting in the new Wharton building.

Some one is advertising "Europe, $100 and up." If the price goes down a little more the Rocky Mountain Club might be able to do it for me or a friend.

Another proof of the value of a college education was the social history of some of our students over the summer in a street fight.

We'd like to suggest that the men students take off the suit clothes worn for a few rounds. If they areHit, we might be able to claim the West Philadelphia championship.

A committee of twenty students from the law school is meeting to circulate a petition that will be presented for the building of a new Wharton School.

The results of the Junior undergraduate election will not be announced at this time of the writing, but if any different candidates are victorious this time we hope the Undergraduate Council will have the wisdom to take the results from Ohio or some state even further west. Direction will not be essential, but it will be the good running start that is important.

The suggestion is made in addition for the building of the Faraday Museum, which problem seems to be the classification of the textbooks used here. The Undergraduate Council of this day wants a good safe place from which to dispense their electricity. It will be a step of pyramids out of the profits from an Ivy name.

We haven't arrived at a good deal of sympathy yet over the fact that the Harvard expedition had to struggle for two years through uncharted territory to the truth. There probably are people in New York who have been dying for longer than that in getting out of the carriage.

You can count on a pretty good storm between now and March 15. The Big Storm must be in a condition to warrant registering for the Winter weather according to annual custom.

The best bet of reporters that we've heard lately came from a student who was being reprimanded by a lecturer for making an allusion during a lecture. When asked what he saw while thinking of the semester's work, "Adventure Magazine," he said that his lecture was prepared for his next class in the Rowling Club, which is a study of the novel of Western life. No one can ever say that the Pennsylvania students don't keep right up to the minute.

Note that the Pennsylvania students have seen the half million "The Pennsylvania of the West Philadelphia" which is the result of the city's efforts.

Pennsylvania's students and undergraduates as well are well qualified to that group of energetic and fast-minded men that will be responsible for the erection of the Pennsylvania University.

Those of us who are still in the undergraduate ranks receive little material or even evident benefit from the organization. But for the alumni group the club serves a definite purpose and provides an easy form of recognition. Before its sole existence there was an evident lack of a medium for work that was not the University and that was not academic in Pennsylvania.

HOLLENBACK OFFERS FOOTBALL TROPHIES

It has been announced that William Hollenbach, former Pennsylvania athlete and member of the all-American football team of 1925, will award a trophy to the local track team developed during the spring practices. Another prize will be offered by Mr. Hollenbach to the man who has shown the best all-around development during the period of spring training.

The object of these prizes, which will be awarded some time in April, is to stimulate general student interest in pre-season football work. The competition is open to all men who register officially to participate. The winners of the prizes will be decided by Coach Yost and his assistants.
