At the time of this writing we have just returned from the Relays to find two headers pacing up and down the office, waiting for the column. For, in the afternoons, we find some more curses, on the results of which we predicted bets of several car loads of coal. The only way of keeping both headers was to fill this space for the Saturday paper. The headers are still pacing up and down the office, and from the direction of the Woolfield Avenue office of the paper we can be a low rumbling which can be nothing else but "one Fred Hailer expressing his opinion of the columnist. It is very probable that this is the last few events and he is quite surprised, as he had never heard of the school before.

Having listened for three months now to the dissonance in the fraternity horns, Boxing Club and classes about all of the European tours that are going to be taken this summer, we have come to the conclusion that we are going to be standing along on the warn waving to the rest of the school boyhood as a whole story of hours not well spent.

We have just got a newiant on the premises behind the making of no author. We were reading some of the booklets written to hon. by the University. During his first week as a Freshman, he put into a fight with the Sophomores, during which his clothing was "worn off," and he himself was almost hurled "into the treacle." His watch, he says, "was never found." At a later class fight, he was hit by the Sophomore board of the small planets. He did have something to put the police, for it was after this that he decided to turn to the political background of the University. It was his favorite building. No wonder he understands the bad men. Such a person must be desperate himself.

Here is a life, though, that should be an inspiration to every Freshman. Next time a thing takes you for a much, seek him in the car with a potato. You may be a freshman in the making.

We have a regular feature where we try to point out some of the prominent events taking place during the week. Today will spell cheering of the School boy and girls as they urged their consuming interest towards the events of real importance. Two quartets to victory on the oval over the hurdle. Two foreign countries perform, records of long standing and resounding with shouts, should see track history in the rungp down, "Joan of Arkansas" will have passed into notoriety. This polyp is the 1925 toffy, this polyp is the 1925 toffy, when the final curtain has been rung down. Correctness in Full Dress Apparel
PROBABLY no one of the many thousands entering a Browning King store each day realizes the size of the organization operating the store, or the countless number of both hands and lands contributing to the apparel for men and boys displayed there.

In this merchandise you see only the finished products. You do not see the sources of raw materials or the many steps of transportation and manufacture; the vast sheep ranches in Australia from which came the wool; the historic mills of England and Scotland weaving the fabrics; the silk being transported from Japan; the great factories of Browning King & Co., with their multitudes of cutters and tailors, making the clothing; the buyers of Browning King searching the markets of the world for fine apparel to be offered Browning King customers.

Nor can any one of the Browning King stores by itself convey any definite impression of Browning King as a "National Institution". To realize this you must view the store as it appears on the map with all the other Browning King stores. There you have the nation and a "National Institution" together. From Boston on the Atlantic to Seattle on the Pacific are the great centers of population set forth by the Browning King stores. There you see how Browning King & Co. provide Browning King apparel and Browning King service to communities with an aggregate population of more than 25 million people.
