Yesterday was a sad day for us with the announcement in the papers that Eliza Perrot had won the thousand-dollar prize for the best American novel of the year. The article we read for the Red and Blue at the beginning of the term was not even placed by the judges.

Even the Christian Association elections which were held yesterday were a dismal failure. The editorials the candidates were handing out were about the poorest in our experience with political elections at this man's University. And that, you'll admit, is just about the worst thing that could be said about editors.

A reader, signing himself "The Blazer Kid," writes in to say that the campus seems to refer to the "blazer," possibly the price of the blazer to the prayer group at one time or at another per week. The idea may have its economical advantages, but unless there is altogether approval of this sort of conversation among the students such as is sure to come if such a plan were adopted:

"Yes, that looks very nice on you. By the way, is it yours?"

"Professor, may I have one (less ten minutes early? Yes, I am going over to be fitted for a pink and yellow blazer that I want to wear down to the library this afternoon."

"Golly, would you put mind looking through that pile of blazers alone for one with a small patch on the collar. I wore that one the last two years. I was supposed to graduate and it fits nicely.

"That fellow with the red blazer must have been first in line today. He has all three buttons complete."

There has been some talk of a talent on campus in honor of one of the first expenses of undergraduates who passed away yesterday. We refer to "Student B," Ray Williams, who boasted of the fact that he had never sold a rolled sale. But perhaps his experience with the French varieties is incapable of expressing on opinion on any subject less than a total and, because of this, we hope the French schools are through for the term before the first summer commuter of students from this man's University arrives. A short note wearing even the smallest of the modis we have observed on campus are likely to be up the White country and bring about a crisis in international politics.

There was really nothing to this week's contest for the first lady pet. It was a runaway, in fact. The student who had her address had been therein the directory, and did not know until the other day that he had been producer of the title of the contest. He was largely with the memory for a time, but nothing will ever be done about it.

We shall be a pair of post markings were by an American student at the University of Paris Law School, attended a party in post stamps at the cost of the student body. It would be improper for the undergraduates to have bought the stamps themselves and their due--should play an important role in attaining the loyalty so characteristic of the products of this great institution.

President Penniman has appealed publicly to the student body to support their University in Friday's parade to the corner of the University, where the students will be being on of the products of this great institution.

DIVIDENDS FROM RELAY COURTESY

While records were being held within the walls of the Stadium on Friday and Saturday, a new record was broken when the student body of a team-in which was a very friendly employer. With an index of athletes from three universities, the University tended the hearty greating of "Welcome" to athletes all over. Such was the acrimonious of the hospitality extended that the departing athletes had only enough of appreciation to express in the impressions recorded above.

While the international and interstate track and field meet was held on the ground, the athletic relay races were most important from Pennsylvania's viewpoint. Schoolboy runners from the leading secondary schools of the state are being held over the dirt track of Franklin Field. Their impression of the University which sponsored the Relay Carnival was made within the walls of a few hours.

That the impressions gained were apparently most favorable was due in a great way to the student body of the students, who made for the much of a Western Pennsylvania team is regional in the part world of many variations. This man, whose racing career has carried him to college campuses all over the country, said: "Coming to the Relay Carnival is a real treat for the

You have a wonderful spirit here. The treatment given us by the men in the fraternity house was certainly fine. It is greatly in contrast with that shown us at some other colleges, where we attended relay and tournaments."

The Kite and Keg Society deserves great credit for arranging for enjoyable the beds of the members, but the student body would have been far more and the freshmen failed to be conforming to their schoolboy goods. Finding the personal contacts and interest of the fraternity men, the sportmen naturally felt the peculiar influence common to all of us—the Pennsylvania spirit. And whether they win or lose, the visiting athletes returned home with a high opinion of the University and Pennsylvania was

WARM WELCOME AT WINTERS

MAYOR KENDRICK PROCLAIMS MAY 1 PENNSYLVANIA DAY

Day of industry in general and of Philadelphia in particular by its scientific research and investigation; and by lending to the city of Philadelphia heightened prestige throughout the world as the home of one of the greatest undertakings not alone of this but of all other countries.

I earnestly urge upon the citizens of Philadelphia that they observe the day by displaying prominently from their homes and offices the University colors of red and blue, and urge with equal earnestness that the citizens of Philadelphia give proper recognition to the fact that in its past undertaking to increase its educational facilities and resources, the University of Pennsylvania is engaged in what it is truly a public duty, from which the possession of the city will benefit and which, therefore, deserves their widespread and unreserved support.

"W. FREELAND KENDRICK, Master of Philadelphia." The Mayor's acceptance of the invitation to the annual meeting of City Hall, paves Plate, been virtually complete the arrangements for the meeting, the active chair man of which will be Benjamin B. Lowell, Master hardware and aluminum of the University of Pennsylvania. The student body will form at 11 o'clock in the Quadrangle, at Thirty-second and Spruce Streets, and will be led in the parade to the place to the University Band. The Philadelphia Police Band also will be in line. University authorities have been assured by Superintendent of Police William H. Wells, while the services of two other bands, have been arranged in addition. The undergraduate will parade by chance, with a special section set aside for members of various University athletic teams. Announcement that the parade will be marshalled by Colonel F. Harrison Smith, of the 1860 Infantry, assisted by other officers of his organization, gives assurance that the parade will move with military precision.
