Return of Opening Day's Canoeing by Committees Assure Success

By W. A. Grant Bishop

Editors of the College Racket and the Lantern State, in a joint interview with the staff of the Lantern, welcomed the approach of the second annual baseball season. The editors consider this year's season as one of the most promising in the history of the University, and believe that the team will be able to hold its own against the other teams of the Big Three. The team will be under the guidance of Captain Harry Will, and the coaching staff will consist of Coach Charles 1. Davis and Coach Edward Wh., who have both demonstrated their ability to lead the team to victory in the past. The team has undergone a rigorous training program and is expected to perform well this season. The editors also mentioned the importance of team spirit and camaraderie in achieving success on the field. They urged all students to support the team and attend the games to show their support. The season is expected to be充满 the excitement and energy of the players, and the team is looking forward to a successful season.
EVENING SCHOOL BANQUET ATTENDED BY OVER 1000

As arranged by Mr. Who Are Prominent in Various Lines of Business

CRAYON ACTS AS TOASTMASTER

More than two hundred students, faculty members and alumni assembled at the annual dinner of the Evening School Association, which was held at the Pennsylvania Railroad Club on Saturday evening. Included in the group were representatives from the five evening schools, which are located in the larger engineering and commercial institutions north of the city.

The program of the evening included several distinct speakers, none of whom made more observations in their various fields of endeavor. This part of the program was supplemented by the recitations of several specially trained members of the Glee Club Quartet.

Theodore H. Grayson ably acted in the capacity of toastmaster. His clear introductions of the speakers and their remarks following the speeches were excellent, with his plan to these present a semi-technical report of his own experiences, the high points in the evening's entertainments. "I don't want you to be thinking about the dinner in any way," he said, "but do go to the Glee Club, and then write and say you were there at two o'clock this afternoon."

The chairman of the Evening School Executive Committee, Mr. John G. Smith, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Evening School, addressed the meeting in a similar manner.

WANTED: YOUR OPINION

Today the student body is called upon to render its opinion on the proposed plan for the selection of a football team to be celebrated during the fall season. The Undergraduate Council will conduct a poll in Houston Hall to determine whether or not the proposal will be adopted.

The resolution, which was drafted by a committee appointed from the three upper classes and approved by both the Undergraduate and Graduate Councils, is reprinted in this issue. According to its provisions, the Undergraduate Council is empowered to select one member next year as a football holdout. This action is to be taken and announced immediately following the game which, in their opinion, deserves celebration.

With a schedule replete with important contests, victories in any one of three or four should merit a celebration. In the event of a successful season, the undergraduates will constantly feel the urge to throw over their studies and celebrate. Consequently, someone must be authorized to make the decision of初步. And no person or organization is better qualified to do this than the governing council of the student body.

The entire plan, however, will be meaningless unless it receives the approval of a representative group of the undergraduate body. Only when we as a group lend our approval to the resolution can it be said that the days of deferred payments are long past and the arranged classes are over.

Let's vote a definite "Yes" or "No" to the proposal.

CONCERTS IN THE QUAD

According to our new column of variety, arrangements are in progress for the organization of a Freshmen orchestra which will entertain residents of the University dormitories two or three times weekly during the remainder of the spring term. With the Junior Balcony as their plan form, the first-year musicians are expected to give concerts during the evening hours.

Men who have lived in the dormitories during their Freshman days—and a lot of us here—will be inclined to discord the practicability of such a scheme. Having heard the moody instrument of sound which emanates from the open windows during the warm season, they naturally will doubt whether harmony can ever be drawn out of such chaos. However, responsibility for the organization and con conduct of the orchestra is assumed by a man whose talent in matters musical has already been proven.

In taking this step there is opportunity to institute a pleasing and wholesome rivalry of outdoor concerts. Undoubtedly, real instrumental talent exists among the ranks of the Quadrangle. With the advantages of training and organization, the Freshmen should be able to develop a large and capable orchestra.

Good music is enjoyed by all; and if the formation of the orchestra proves a success we can predict with safety that it will find an appreciative audience.

Another communication, just handed in to us, inquires as to the real purpose of the Wharton School. All we can say is that we have only been here three years and as yet have not been able to determine.

When we lost our address book we went to the Lost and Found Department in an effort to recover it. We mentioned the names of our two lunches which we had recorded in it, and the point lady in charge of the department promptly handed in four books.

ON WITH COLOR, LET JOY BE UNREstrained!

Neckties, ties, bows, four-in-hands, cravats, and scarfs. Those are a few names given to the noble necklace.

We've got them all—styles galore, patterns gay. Colors? Well, look them over. It's going to be worth your while to look our assortment over. Equally fancy half hose, golf hose and sweaters. You'll notice we haven't underestimated its value. Don't mistake this sort of necktie for a mere trifle; it is a very expensive gift and should never be given a trifle. As Mr. Clark says in the introduction: "Many of these boys have been in school for so long a time that they have formed habits that are peculiar to their previous academic home." Naturally, the reason for this is that the tone of the school is not an academic one and no person ever is interested in what would be called "higher education". Among those are popular regalia. They range from "With our hands," to "In the spirit of salutary and sensible." Of the necktie, "Whips of Mail", or "In the spirit of salutary and sensible." Of the necktie, "Whips of Mail", as the most rich in industrial qualities. Yet the remainder of this section is one of equal indifference and attention. And the effect of the book is that there is no more accurate or inimitable description of a person or the technique of a play, his dis- cussion of the book, that is not as it purports. In its entirety, "Crip- to Fit" is to be had our efforts to promote and bring to a wider audience of philosophical writers. And therein lies the charm.
