THE SENIOR CLASS MEETING

Today the members of the Senior Class gather in the last time in their college years. To many will come the thought that at last it is all over. Their time will be filled with regret. There are others who will view with regret the passing of a group with which they have been intimately associated for years. Never again will one see the D. II. V. O. and the Senior Class as one organization.

But the Senior Class meeting today will be called for the purpose of saying farewells or explanations. The meeting will mark the end of four years of college, but the beginning of a work which will join the senior class with the greater and wide reaching General Alumni Association. Today the permanent Alumni officers of the Class of 1925 will be elected.

Because of the increased activity of the Pennsylvania Alumni groups and the all important parts which they have, and will play in the activity of today and tomorrow in the near future, the present Senior Class select men who will unreservedly represent in the years to come. The choice they have made is a popular one. Results, as you last class meeting you should have a splendid turnout.

For the first interest of your group or organization will be a meeting today that he may elect reliable men and understand the importance of the Alumni Association. In the spirit of the Pennsylvania Alumni groups, the spirit of the Alumni, we urge you not to overlook this opportunity.

ANOTHER POINT OF CONTACT

Yesterday we took the liberty of recommending to the graduating class that each man subscribe to the Pennsylvania as a means of keeping in close contact with the trend of campus affairs after their present connection with the University is severed. Another and possibly a better means to which the young alumni can become united to his Alma Mater is by joining the General Alumni Society.

That society which we consider is the only true Alumni group that the university has. It is the only Alumni group that is made up of young alumni. To join the society, taken officially by the Pennsylvania Alumni Association, is to stand for absolutely nothing, might well use. He's away a mirage seeking an exempt Ion.

Well it seems as though the most logical thing to do is go down to this business and gather you money out of pockets of a laugh. We know the professor will laugh hung, so you are our great variety.

No uncertain Descartes was a truly great philosopher and we are told, he completely held up a thing in real if you can express it rationally. We therefore say with the utmost of confidence, that this column is hard to fill, thereby elucidating the principle he has expounded so kindly.

Plato in a dialogue received a system of political organization which would be the modern state upon the four cardinal virtues of prudence, courage, temperance, and justice. Perhaps the Intercollegiate Council should follow that plan. What?

Hercules unattainable to the the most standard we have been told, and he developed the philosophy which bi. themed the Becks. Now we can't list our offspring. We sort of people the Raths were and in no way like to cast another. Our record...

Tate of Weekly Trip Home—Over The Telephone

"It's Jim . . . Telephoning from College!"

Jim hasn't a motor-car. Jim hasn't a Phi Beta Kappa key. He isn't what you would call a Social Lion. Neither is he a star athlete.

Yet, if you were to ask the first man you met on the Campus . . . who is the best liked man at college . . . he could, with probability, mention Jim's name.

Because Jim has a reputation for being a good fellow—a fellow who is one of those jolly, hearty, kind-hearted chaps who figure that the other fellow is a 'genuine'; one who is a real friend.

That this reputation is well founded, is proved by the fact that every week of his College life (and he is a Senior now) he telephones his Mother and his Dad. A worthy habit, surely.

But if you only knew how much your Mother and Dad would enjoy a weekly telephone chat with you, if you only knew how much they would enjoy these little chats yourself you would certainly emulate the example of the noted Jim.
