INTERESTING FACTS OF HISTORY
George Washington and His Commission

On July 3, 1776, Gen. George Washington included in his commission to Colonel John Hancock, a Declaration of Independence, which was to be presented to the Continental Congress of Harvard College. This event will be commemorated by a celebration on July 3, 1925.

The commission, which made George Washington "Colonel and Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army," by vote of the Continental Congress of Philadelphia, was dated June 18, 1776, and is signed by John Hancock, who was then President of Congress.

This commission was the first document to be signed by Gen. Washington in his official capacity. It was signed by him the next year, is one of the most important.

The original engrossed copy of the Washington commission can be seen in the Library of Congress. A facsimile of the Declaration of Independence has been reproduced by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston.

Do what Toledo did

Once Toledo had a nuisance, a tract of swamp land near the lake, a breeder of mosquitoes, foul odors and fogs.

But an automatic pumping station, equipped with motors made by the General Electric Company, turned the swamp into dry land—and abolished the menace to the city.

This is one example of what electricity can do. As you meet life's problems, think of electricity as a valiant and ever-ready ally.

GENERAL ELECTRIC
hav been handpicked at the start five or six yards. This was probably due to the condition of the track, which at this time was almost reduced to mud from the heavy rainfall. McHolland was tossed out of second place by Forbes in the 220 yard dash. He was running a close second until the last ten yards, when Forbes, of Princeton, made a bold latal sprint and succeeded in passing him. The bow was won by Norton, of Yale, in the comparatively slow time of 23 seconds flat.

FRENCH EDUCATOR INSPECTS PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENTS

Enormous numbers of women and girls into the business and commercial work of France as a result of the World War has awakened that country to a realization of the need for better educational facilities to train women for business careers, according to Mademoiselle Sannou. French educator, who was the guest of University officials recently.

The late need in France for capable women to fill the higher executive positions became apparent during the first months of the war when military necessity removed from business and commercial life thousands of men holding responsible positions.

Several women in the United States were encouraged to try the task of carrying on the work left by the men. Their work has proved so successful that the business schools, in which women could be trained to take executive positions, have been established in the United States by the University of Pennsylvania and many other institutions.

QUEEN MARIE OF ROUMANIA
writes for
The Evening Bulletin.
PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

Begins Monday, June 1st, and continues Daily

It is with great pleasure that The Evening Bulletin makes announcement of a series of remarkably interesting articles written by royalty itself, entitled

"How it feels to be a Queen"

In consenting to write these articles, Queen Marie wants to send a very genuine message of friendship and good will to the readers of The Evening Bulletin.

She says: "I have often expressed my great liking and admiration for America and its people."

"I feel a certain pioneer kinship with them. I sympathize with their sincerity, their vigor, their eagerness to see, learn and do, their determination to get there, to succeed."

How it feels to be a Queen

Here in America where every woman is a queen, our women and men have often wondered about the lives of royalty. The American viewpoint usually is to regard a queen as a sort of national luxury, possibly an ornament, certainly not a necessity. Yet the closer you get to Queen Marie by reading these intimate articles you learn much that is beneath the surface, you feel the womanly heart-throbs, you get to know the wife and you find the queen mother solicitous not only for her own children, but also for the thousands of big and little children of her realm.

"I belong to the age when marriage meant a bond we had not the intention to want. "For better or worse" had a literal meaning and we believed in the vows we were taking and we stood the "worse" even if there was little "better" about it.

A Queen’s Ideal of a Man

"The type of man I like is the tall, quiet, lean man, going a little grey at the temples. He is my contemporary. We understand each other. I want to ride through the great wastes with him, to feel trees, swim rivers. I want to sit of an evening hand in hand with him and rest. I want to lean my head on his shoulder and hear his strong, faithful heart beat. I like hard workers better than the man who is forever rushing...

"Men... Do I like taming them? Yes, decidedly yes. But I do not like them too tame. I like playing with fire, as does any real woman worth her mettle. But I always played fair, and made real laudable efforts to leave the matches alone."

Why University Men Need Slickers

"Just think," said Frank Merriwell, "If Flitz' big Park Royal hadn't gone blooey that time we took the trip to Atlantic City last Easter, we would never have discovered the Collegiate Car which has swept the campus by storm."

"That's nonsense," replied Tom Rover. "Flitz '26 did more than anybody else to popularize Henry Ford's roadsters with the new French horns.

And you notice that Flitz '26 always carries a slicker in his Collegiate Car in case of rain, and always wears the new Pearl Grey Flannel Trousers which go to make this motor outfit complete.

Flitz is also thinking of buying one of the new linen three-piece sports suits with knickers, which have just arrived at Perry's.

FRANKLIN was a man of vision. But it is doubtful if even he foresaw the vast growth in size, scope and influence of the great University of Pennsylvania.

The sum total of achievement wrought by the army of graduates that have gone out from Old Penn is beyond calculation. Every quarter and corner of the globe has been benefited by what they have done.

The University is a builder of men—and women. It lays enduring foundations for mental and physical growth.

It is our privilege and responsibility to supply and safeguard milk—the most vital single factor in building the physical and mental welfare of each individual. Fresh, rich, wholesome GOLD MEDAL MILK has been the foundation for physical and mental growth of another great army of men, women and children.

At the University itself GOLD MEDAL MILK is preferred. It furnishes energy and muscle to her athletes in training and is a part of the daily fare in most fraternity houses and wherever else food is served.
