SPORTS MADE TO MEASURE

Participation in extra-curricular activities is a subject that has been somewhat neglected in some of the other most current opinions. It has been discussed by inter-universities, and it has received considerable attention in campus publications as well as in other publications and newspapers. Through these methods the opportunity of being associated with athletics has been constituted. It is hardly possible that anyone does not realize the worth of campus competition.

Activities in the University of Pennsylvania are so numerous and diversified that they cannot fail to appeal even to the most casual of students. Pennsylvania has almost every kind of sport that is played, and among the students of athletic ability is not denied the opportunity of competition. Just now Pennsylvania's minor sports are beginning to appeal to the management's competitive and candid-eate for the games. Soon the work of the winter will be over, and practically every sport will be active.

For years Pennsylvania's minor sports have been severely handicapped because of lack of knowledge of the sport.

The physical examinations show that this is not the case. Pennsylvania competes favorably with schools of any size in regard to equipment. Only one conclusion can be drawn, and that is that the average Pennsylvania student is in need of instruction in minor athletic sports as well as in major sports.

The University never fails to inform me that its students take part in minor sports. Our football, soccer, track, basketball, and other such departments are active and strong. While those sports prosper our minor sports continue to struggle. It is a question of lack of interest. What is the trouble? Do we neglect the major sports because there is less of personal interest in them, or is it some other reason?

If the present generation of Pennsylvania men is lacking in con-

The company has had a very successful Fall, winning the Illinois and Pennsylvania football schedules.

However, the Illinois Band will probably be travelling north celebrating the New York Central.

"It's Bill Plooming from College by Long Distance" "Notably reports have come to me lately that the I.A.A. is in trouble. Never mind, you know, stands for 'naturally.' Yes, I'll see you soon."

That scrawny looking individual who will approach you at Thirty-sixth Street and Woodland Avenue today is not all clothes, man, so don't beat him down at sight. He is merely a division worker putting out the note, if we remember the P. & A. correctly.

We sincerely approved of yesterday's editorial on the subject of conducting the Wharton School examinations. Not only has it served as "a scholastic straight jacket," but has made the point which deserved the support of the upper class and should if properly sup-

The art of writing editorials has not yet, in my opinion, reached its highest development. But the idea is fine, and remembering several recent examples of editorial sports can be achieved in the fourth estate, or the fourth dimension or something else that appeared in the column next day, we suggest another new course for the College catalog. We don't want to be trying to copy the whole "critique," but we do think that a course in how to read editorial sports would be interesting.

Perhaps the Latin Department could develop a good course in "if it made a sample study of all the editorials that have appeared this year." It's not all right, but it is a matter of interest.
