Plan Annual Shore Glee Club Concert

Embrace Residues to Approve at Wadson Hall Atlantic City, January 23

Robert Meacock, Manager, Glee Club Director, announced yesterday that the contract for the January 15 Annual Shore Glee Club Concert of the University will be signed.

Coach Miller Holds Jay-Vee Practice In

Despite the fact that Franklin Field provided space for the Varsity track squad to practice, the University has decided to use Temple's outdoor track for the Jay-Vee squad. Coach Robert K. Miller, who will coach the Jay-Vee team, said that the Temple track is ideal for the purpose.

Three hundred crew members were given a break from their strenuous games the evening after their victory over the Navy. The crew members were able to relax and enjoy the evening.

In addition to the crew members, the University also has a crew team that practices on the same schedule. The University's crew team has been invited to compete in a meet against the Temple University crew team.

Varsity Passes Make Ready for Dickinson Tilt

After a short rest following last week's varsity meet, the Red and Blue football team received praise for their excellent play in the game against Dickinson. The team's performance was excellent, and the varsity team will now prepare for the match against Dickinson. The team will practice on Wednesday and Thursday, and will play their final game of the season on Saturday.

The University's football team has been invited to compete in a meet against the Temple University football team. The University's football team has been invited to compete against Temple University in a meet on November 18.

Twenty-nine Must Carry On

The announcement that only nineteen men have thus far signed up for the second edition for the editorial board of the Pennsylvania comes as a surprise to the oldtimer and may well be viewed with concern by all who have an interest in the welfare of the daily. This smaller number of boosters is not enough to assure a high standard of reporting on the paper. It is indirect comment to the embarrassments with which similar combinations have been plagued.

Such poor response does not auger well for the future of the Pennsylvania, showing as it does a decided lack of competitive spirit among the members of the Freshman class.

For forty years, the Pennsylvania has lived, grown, and prospered. The responsibility for its continuance has been handed down from class to class, and it presents for Pennsylvania men more than the duties and pleasures of all its other organizations. The class of 1923 must now take up the work. Its members will be here to carry on when the present group is gone.

But letting for the Pennsylvania should be looked upon not only as a duty but also as a great privilege. The junior and senior editors become released in the rushintel of journal work. They learn to write with facility and to express themselves with clarity. They become acquainted with the University and with many new aspects of the campus whose acquaintance is valuable to the new students. For boisterous that will make his college life more worth while. These are only a few of the many advantages which feeling affords.

Football's Future

Under the caption "Football's Future," our city column criticizes the Faculty Ledger, recently made the following statement in an otherwise conciliatory speech to the members of the Association of American Football Coaches in alluding to the overemphasis on their sport:

"It is significant that the Association of American Football Coaches, in its annual meeting, has admitted, the "overemphasis" charge against the game and taken steps to meet it. It has agreed upon a rigid adherence to the rule against practice before September 15. Only two hours daily may be devoted to football. It issued a six-page conference bulletin containing from its membership any who play coaches, rules, and identify the professional game.

"There will be more "All-American" cones or players named by those coaches. Thereby they will help to end a practice that may once carry a name.

"Overemphasize and fast friends of football have been in seeing it done to help them. They charge that omission of the "overemphasis" one unneeded. Evidently the men in close touch with the sport do not agree. They find the rules are sound and make no recommendations for change in the game itself, but they have moved in to end of some of the abuses that have grown up around it."

Footbal has started to do its own house-cleaning, and the coaches are the first to brand the brown. Moms and thinking friends of football will wish to see more power to their arms. The coaches have begun something that is up to the college and their alma mater to finish.

It is gratifying to the student body to note that one of the eight alleged ticket speculators apprehended at the time of the Cornell game by Federal agents has been found guilty and fined a substantial sum. Prompt legal action on the part of the university will not remove the "scolding evil" from Pennsylvania football.

of teams and teams workers to adequately select the enrollment in that particular class and department.
No worker will have more than twenty men to interview on the Memorial Hall project, and in most cases the number of names given each worker will be even smaller. It may be seen from this that the Memorial Hall Fund Campaign is not to be the organized, hopscotch drive familiar in the campus. Each student will be contacted by a series of campany workers. Each student is to be enlisted by but one man and his efforts will be checked. In this way it is hoped by the campaign leaders that every pros-psect will be covered with the least amount of annoyance to him.
Thus it may be seen that system is the basis of the Memorial Hall Fund Campaign which will begin the 9th day of January 11. Some of the advance workers have turned in favorable reports, and one student who desires to withdraw his name
from publication has already subscribed $300. With such a favorable start and a complex utilization of the potential power in the campaign committee the above promises to be a success.
